CAUSED PURSES TO OPEN

In All Sections Generous Provision Was Made for Those Not Well Endowed With the Goods of This World—Some Notes as to the Celebration of the Day.

Washington, December 25.—From the president of the nation to the humblest resident, the citizens of Washington enjoyed one feature of the holiday in common—a glorious white Christmas. With dawn today came the first of snow, and by the time most of the people in the city were awake the ground was covered to a depth of half-an-inch or more. There was no wind and little real cold.

President Taft and his family spent Christmas in no different manner from that of the thousands of others. Charles and Robert Taft and Miss Helen were at home, and the president spent the greater part of his day surrounded by his family. There were no formalities. Later in the day the president went to the executive offices, and put in some time with official duties.

Mrs. Taft, accompanied by her daughter, Helen, attended services this morning at St. John's Episcopal church.
The church is just a block from the white house, and Mrs. Taft trudged through the snowstorm without an umbrella, both in going to and returning from the edifice.
President Taft remained indoors all day, working on the problem, "What is Whiskey?" This mooted question, raised by distillers under the pure food act, has been pending for some time, and the president has determined to settle it as soon as possible. The decision, which will probably be 5,000 words in length, will be announced tomorrow.

Vice President and Mrs. Sherman spent the day at their home in Ulster, N. Y. A family gathering was a feature of the day at the home of Secretary Knox, on K street. With Mr. and Mrs. Knox were their sons, Hugh and Philip, and their daughter, Mrs. J.
Tindie, and her husband, of Valley Forge, Pa.

Secretary Dickinson took his Christmas dinner on board the Mayflower, en route to Porto Rico. Secretary Meyer, who has been absent on a hunting trip, hurried home to spend the day with his family.

Secretary and Mrs. MacVeagh, Secretary and Mrs. Ballinger and Attorney General and Mrs. Wickensham, celebrated Christmas at their residences in Washington.

Mrs. Taft received today as a Christmas gift from the women of the cabinet a beautiful diamond brooch.
Each woman contributed a certain amount, and the purchase was made by Mrs. Knox, wife of the secretary of state.

SEMBLANCE OF WHITE XMAS WAS ENJOYED BY LOUISVILLE

Louisville, Ky., December 25.— Louisville was one of the few southern cities today to enjoy the emblem of a White Christmas. Snow fell at intervals last night and today, until most of the city wore a thin white mantle.

WU TING FANG'S CHRISTMAS GIFT TO WIZARD OF MENLO PARK

Menlo Park, N. J., December 25.—
Thomas A. Edison's most prized Christmas present is a photograph record made for him by Dr. Wu Ting Fang, retiring Chinese minister to the United States. Dr. Wu visited the wizard yesterday, and after inspecting the inventor's plant and asking innumerable questions about everything he saw, talked into one of Mr. Edison's photographs.

The record which he left behind him is as follows:
"December 24, 1909.—Mr. Edison has just shown me a great many wonderful things. He is a great man. I have heard about him for many years, and have always wanted to meet him.

"He also has heard of me, he says,
and I think we are both glad to meet.
He is a remarkable inventor, typifying this twentieth century, the age of great things.

"Mr. Edison is still a young man, and will do yet more wonderful things."

GARDEN OF THE GODS PUT IN COLORADO SPRINGS STOCKING

Colorado Springs, Col., December 25.
Colorado Springs found in its stocking the biggest Christmas gift in the history of the city—the famed Garden of the Gods, presented by the late Charles E. Perkins.

This marvelous park, with 480 acres, which is known throughout the United States and in many foreign lands for its curious rock formations, today became the property of Colorado Springs.

WALSH EATS CHRISTMAS DINNER
GUARDED BY U. S. MARSHALS

Chicago, December 25.—The cup of good cheer was not to be withheld from the lips of John R. Walsh today.
A Christmas tree and all other attributes of festivity was enjoyed at a family reunion at the convicted bankster's residence.

There were two "guests" present.

WU PREACHES TO THE WORLD PEACE SERMON

Leaving the United States, the Chinese Diplomat Proposes Plan to Abolish War.

GREAT COURT PROPOSED TO DECIDE ALL ISSUES

There Would Be a System of International Circuit Courts and Appeals From These Courts to Supreme Court of the Nations—Wu Says China Will Agree to Such Plan.

(By Hayne Davis, Special Representative of the Publishers' Press.)

New York, December 25.—I gladly accepted the offer of the Publishers' Press to represent it in a conference with Wu Ting Fang, formerly representative of China at Washington, in regard to peace and the possible means of achieving its blessings, for I knew this eminent Chinaman to be not only among the most intelligent, but among the best disposed of the persons sent to Washington by foreign governments during the past two decades.

His excellency received me most cordially, and for more than an hour spoke with the utmost candor upon the question of international peace and justice.

Wu Ting Fang on Peace.
Speaking personally and not on behalf of his government, he said:

"I am glad to speak of international peace and justice upon the eve of my return to my own country, after having succeeded in concluding a treaty of arbitration between our government and the United States. That was a good step. I am glad it is taken, but in my judgment the treaty does not go far enough, though it was the best that could be done now.

"It is exactly the same as the twenty-three other treaties concluded by the government of the United States with foreign powers during Mr. Roosevelt's last term as president. These treaties reserve for forcible settlement when diplomacy fails, all questions affecting the vital rights, independence or honor of the contracting powers.

"While nations that are heavily armed insist upon this policy, other nations that are not heavily armed are not sure of having their rights respected.

China Forced to Arm.
"My country, for instance, is not heavily armed, and has been compelled to begin the reformation of its army and navy. China loves peace, but other nations love not peace enough to keep peace, so China must prepare armaments that it really doesn't want to prepare. China is reforming its army and navy for self-defense, entirely, not for aggression at all.

"With international arbitration and justice at the place it now occupies, no nation can object to armament by other nations to protect their own rights. And while we must make armaments heavier now, we should all study and work more to make arbitration progress until it is possible to abolish war.

"I know President Roosevelt, after the existing treaties of arbitration were concluded in his last administration, declared himself in favor of a peace program which he proposed. His program calls for adequate armament and effective arbitration as corrective agencies for national security and for international peace and justice, and it defines effective arbitration as that which will bind nations to respect each other's territory and sovereignty therein and to arbitrate all other questions. That is a splendid program.

Great Fear of Nations.
"It goes much further than the treaties now in force, but I am in favor of going even further. I am in favor of treaties as advanced as that, and in addition, I am in favor of an international conference to decide all questions that may have to be arbitrated, and of an international congress to specify the laws that the court would be governed by. It would be well for governments to create a court of justice for deciding all questions between them and to agree that they would defend each other if other nations refuse to arbitrate differences before the court. If great governments will not consent to this, many small ones could do so. This would be a good move. Uruguay proposed something like this at the second Hague conference. It ought to be done.

"There could be a court for Asiatic nations, a court for European nations, a court for South American nations,
a court for North American nations.
These would correspond for nations to your circuit courts of the United States. Cases between nations in the same continent would come first before the court for that continent. If the judgment was not satisfactory there could be an appeal to a higher court.
The judges to decide the cases on appeal should be chosen from all the international circuit courts by the governments concerned in the case.

Details Can Be Worked Out.
"These are details that can be worked out. The main purpose is to provide for international justice and to abolish war. In order to do all that is possible to avoid this, the governments should select as delegates to the third Hague conference capable men who are heart and soul for this purpose. Not being half-hearted, they find some way to success, even if their first propos-

American Warships Were in Harbor Close to the Mexican

Managua, December 25.—Jose Santos Zelaya, the ex-president of Nicaragua, has taken himself out of the country and is now aboard the Mexican gun-boat General Guerrero, bound for Salina Cruz.

Under the cover of darkness Thursday morning Zelaya, accompanied by a heavily armed guard, proceeded to Corinto, in which port the Mexican warship had been lying for several days, close to the United States protected cruiser Albany. Other American warships swung at anchor in the harbor, with marines aboard, lazily awaiting instructions.

Soon Safe Under Mexic Flag.
Zelaya's coming was unheralded, but a guard from the Guerrero received him and soon he was safe under the protection of the Mexican flag. At five o'clock in the afternoon the warships weighed anchor and pointed out to sea. A salute of thirteen guns was fired from the shore and hundreds of soldiers and citizens waved the former dictator a farewell from the beach.
Zelaya stood alone and waved back in answer. He uncovered when abreast of the Albany, but the American cruiser made no response. Then he turned again toward the shore, gazing until out of sight.

Shortly before the arrival of Zelaya at Corinto, the United States gunboat Princeton got up steam and proceeded for San Juan del Sur. The rumor spread that the Princeton intended to watch the movement of the Mexican gunboat, but she proceeded directly down the coast and her arrival at her destination was later reported, greatly relieving the anxiety of the Zelayan adherents.

Madrid Won't Resign.
Managuans in general were greatly relieved when they learned that Zelaya had gone, and President Madriz has already begun his promised work of reform.

All reports that Madriz intends to resign the presidency are without a shred of truth. He himself announced that he accepted the office only after mature consideration of the opportunity the position gave him to bring about harmony and peace in Nicaragua, and also of the dangers which attended his acceptance. He is willing to face the dangers, he says, in order to save the country.

NEW YORK'S FOURTH BIG BRIDGE TO OPEN;
IT IS THE GREATEST SPAN IN THE WORLD

The Manhattan bridge, the fourth and largest structure spanning the East river between Manhattan and Brooklyn, will be formally opened on January 1. The first official act of Mayor-elect Gaynor when he goes into office will be the acceptance of the bridge. The gigantic structure which is to relieve the traffic on the Brooklyn bridge was opened to pedestrians on Christmas Eve and was brilliantly illuminated. Some work is still in progress on the bridge, but it is practically complete. It is the greatest

FATHER AUBRY
VISITS ATLANTA

High Official of Marist Order in the City.

White-Bearded Priest, Who Has Served for Years in the Wildest of Mission Work, Says Mass at Sacred Heart Church.

Father A. Aubry, who is in Atlanta on an inspection tour of the property and the work of the Marist orders, is the guest of Father John Gunn for a few days.

He said ten o'clock mass at the Sacred Heart church yesterday morning, presenting to Atlanta Catholics the unusual sight of a white-bearded priest on the altar.

It was the first time many of those present had ever seen, other than a clean-shaven priest. There is no rule in the Catholic church governing this matter, but it has become a custom for all missionaries of this church in America to eschew mustaches and beards. In the mission fields, where Father Aubry has passed a large part of his life, and is in no way compulsory upon any member of the priesthood.

Father Aubry is a patriarchal looking minister. He is about fifty-five years old. He comes from one of the best families of France, is splendidly educated, has always had the respect and confidence of the order, and has been entrusted with a number of very important duties.

He has been assigned to inspect the Marist property and report on the progress of the work in France, England, America and in Mexico. His mission work has been largely done in the New Hebrides and in Australia.

The Marists are a great mission order. They support between $60 and $80 millionaires in the widest parts of the world. It is probable they have the only missionaries in the world who work among the cannibals, this being the case in the New Hebrides.

Father Aubry goes from Atlanta to New Orleans and then to Mexico and onward to San Francisco.

FUNERAL ARRANGEMENTS FOR JUDGE VAN EPPS

Services Will Be Conducted at First Methodist Church Today.

At a late hour last night the funeral arrangements of Judge Howard Van Epps were announced. The body will reach the city at 8 o'clock this morning, and will be immediately taken to the Van Epps apartments, at the corner of West Peachtree and Third streets.

It will remain there until 2 o'clock, when it will be taken to the First Methodist church, where the funeral services will be conducted by Rev. Dr.
French. After the services the body will be removed to the chapel of Barclay & Brandon, to remain there until Monday, when it will be sent to Athens for interment.

The following list of pallbearers has been appointed: Judge Joseph Henry Lumpkin, Judge Ben H. Hill, Judge
William R. Hammond, A. A. Meyer,
James W. Austin and Robert Lee Avery.

$25,000 DAMAGE
DONE BY FLAMES

Adjoining Property of the Campbell, Brownlee & Harrison Company, Furniture Dealers, Is Badly Damaged.

The warehouse of the Sims Grain Company, located on the railroad in the rear of 434 Marietta street, with its contents of grain, hay and foodstuffs, was destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon, and adjoining property of the Campbell, Brownlee & Harrison Company, furniture dealers, was badly damaged.

The property loss, it is estimated, will exceed $25,000. A valuable dray horse belonging to the furniture company was burned in its stable before the brute could be led to a place of safety.

The fire originated from a spark of a passing locomotive engine which alighted in some loose hay in the warehouse and quickly spread into flames.
The alarm was turned in about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and when the firemen returned to their trucks it was 5 o'clock.

The Sims Grain Company will be the largest loser. The smoke and water ruining what grain and hay escaped the fire. The building was of wood and one-story high.

The fire had reached the rear of the furniture store of Campbell, Brownlee & Harrison, at 436 Marietta street, when the firemen arrived, and this concern will suffer the next greatest loss from badly damaged stock of goods, in addition to its horse.

The warehouse is so located that it was with great difficulty that the department secured fighting ground. The fire was under control within an hour, but it required the work of two hours to entirely extinguish the bed of coals in the warehouse.

The Sims Grain Company is owned by Claude E. Sims, of Buckhead.

ATLANTA LOSES
TWO FINE LIONS

Death Comes to Billy and to Idel.

Animals Suffer From Ptomaine Poisoning; the Veterinarians Finding It Impossible to Give Lions Proper Treatment, Because of Danger Involved.

Both members of the lion family in the Grant Park Zoo died yesterday from the effects of ptomaine poisoning. They had been sick for only a few days, during which time everything possible was done for them. They continued to grow worse, however, and Billy died yesterday morning while Idel, his mate, followed within a few hours. An autopsy was held.

Keeper W. A. Sorrow noticed on Tuesday that Billy was ailing. He paid little attention at first, but Wednesday the lion seemed to be no better, while the lioness was seen to be similarly affected. Drs. Carnes & Carnes, veterinary surgeons were called in, as was Joe Ferrari, of the Rhoda Royal circus, who has had no little experience with wild animals. It was difficult to doctor the animals, as their cages could not be entered until both beasts were too far gone for the medicines to effect a cure.

Idel, the lioness, has been at the park for over three years, while Billy was bought by the city more than two years ago.

BANKER FLETCHER
DIES IN TENNESSEE

He Was Father of Mrs.
Booth Tarkington.

Nashville, Tenn., December 25.— Stoughton J. Fletcher, several times a millionaire and owner of the Fletcher National Bank of Indianapolis, died today at his country seat, near Gallatin, 26 miles northeast of here.
Mr. Fletcher was 58 years old. He had,
for several years, been in very bad health, and retired from active business. He leaves a son and three daughters, one of the latter being Mrs.
Booth Tarkington, wife of the author and playwright.

RICH AND POOR
MUST BE EQUAL BEFORE COURTS

So Declare Jurists of Country in Discussing Taft's Utterance on 'Law's Delays.'

NATIONAL INTEREST
AROUSSED IN QUESTION

Representative Supreme Court Justices and Attorneys General Are One in Urging That the Stand of President for Reform in Judicial Procedure
Be Made Effective.

New York, December 25.—(Special by the Publishers' Press.—In view of the national interest felt toward action which congress may take on President Taft's recommendations that "the law's delays be eliminated as greatly as possible and the costs in litigation be minimized," the Publishers' Press has gathered views of representatives, supreme court justices and attorney generals throughout the country.

These eminent jurists united in declaring favorably towards the stand taken by President Taft.

Especially interested is attached to the statements of jurists in those states where, it is alleged, the systems of procedure deserve immediate attention.
One law for the rich and poor alike is the slogan of the general movement.

In the south, where it has been said there is one justice for the negro and another for the white, particular interest is attached to the authoritative statements.

In the west, where the frontier so recently existed, the same need has been felt.

On account of the widespread interest upon the subject the recommendations of the jurists appended have been forwarded to President Taft.

By A. H. Whitfield.
(Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Mississippi.)

I concur most heartily in everything said by President Taft on this subject.
I think it a very wise thing to have a commission appointed, as suggested by him, to take up this subject as related to the federal courts. And after that commission shall have made its report, the states should act in the light of such report. It goes without saying that too great care cannot be exercised in the selection of so important a commission. Nothing but the highest legal ability should be considered; partisanship should be utterly eliminated.

President Taft himself made a record as a judge of the circuit court of appeals never surpassed, if ever equalled, and is thoroughly competent, therefore,
to speak from the standpoint of a great judge, of the needed reforms. If anyone thinks his criticisms of the administration of criminal justice in the United States severe, let such a one read the address of Judge Charles Amlound on "The Quest for Error," delivered a few years since before the great state bar association of Minnesota, and he will doubt no longer.

It is not too much to say, as those who have followed the history of the subject know, that the administration of the criminal law both in the federal courts and in the state courts in this country is fifty years, at least, behind its administration in England. The truth is, that the many safeguards in the constitution and in the legislation, in this country, thrown around a person tried charged with crime, are the result of expressions written in these instruments by freemen struggling against a condition of tyranny despotism existing at the time.

The prototype of these provisions first written in the various charters of English liberty.

When they were so written there was a great need of protection citizen against the king, and the arbitrary, despotic methods against which these provisions were written.

But the situation

MEN START RIOT IN CHURCH

Three People Seriously Injured.

Four Policemen Were Disarmed by Rioters—Had to Send for Reinforcements—Women Threw Their Children Through Windows to Safety.

Washington, Ind., December 25.—In a riot at the General Baptist church, 1 mile west of this city, late last night, Willis Ellis and Ed Herron were cut on the head by thrown bricks and the Teller chapel was badly cut up, while many men and women, who used the windows to escape, were injured. The injured men are not expected to live.

The trouble began when Claude Holton, Arnold Holton, Chester Turner, Robert Holton and four others entered the church and began a disturbance. Four policemen were sent to quiet the rioters, but the officers were disarmed. While they were coming back to town for reinforcements the men began fighting among themselves. The women in order to protect their children, threw them through the windows. The three Holtons and Turner were arrested.

Another small riot took place at a dance on last night. About forty people received minor bruises. Twenty-three arrests were made today for the two disturbances.

FAKE BANK EXAMINERS WORKING THE COUNTRY

Comptroller of the Currency Puts Banks on Notice.

Washington, December 25.—Fake bank examiners are operating in different parts of the United States to an extent which has brought them to the official notice of the comptroller of the currency. It is held by Comptroller Lawrence O. Murray that the men attempt to play the part of an examiner for the purpose of obtaining information as to the location and strength of bank vaults, preparatory to forcing them.

Each authorized examiner is provided with a commission signed by the secretary of the treasury and the comptroller. In addition, he carries an identification card bearing his signature, which the banks may require him to duplicate before giving him access to the books.

DISABLED STEAMER BEING TOWED TO PORT

Leyland Liner Cuban Picked Up by the Bohemian.

Queenstown, December 25.—The Leyland steamer Cuban, with her rudder lost or steering gear useless, and with the steamship Bohemian, of the same line, in tow to act as a rudder, has passed Brown Head, seventy miles west of here, presumably on her way to this port or Liverpool.

The disabled Cuban left New Orleans on December 2 for Liverpool and the Bohemian left Liverpool on December 16 for New York. Both were well on their respective journeys crossing each other's path, when the crippled Cuban was picked up.

SAXON SPINNERS COMING TO SOUTH

Foreign Plants to Be Removed to Texas.

Cotton Mill Men of Saxony Have an Agent in Texas Seeking Locations—The High Prices of Raw Cotton Are Inducing Spinners to Move.

San Antonio, Texas, December 25.—Cotton spinners of Saxony are contemplating removing their plants bodily to Texas. To that end, Gustav L. Hergert, of Boston, is in San Antonio interviewing business men and seeking promises of support. From here he will go to Austin to see Governor Campbell. In March he will go to Europe and report to the spinners. High prices of raw cotton in Saxony and the visit about two years ago of a committee of German cotton manufacturers to Texas turned the eyes of the Saxon spinners to this state.

Engineer Is Killed. Memphis, Tenn., December 25.—(Special.)—Martin Williams, 60 years old, for 40 years a Mississippi river engineer, while crossing the Illinois Central track at the foot of Court avenue, received injuries from which he died at 8 o'clock this morning. He was one of the best known river engineers in the south. During the rainy days when the steamboats flourished he ran a boat from New Orleans to St. Paul. He was on the Robert E. Lee, the Natchez and other famous boats. One sister, Mrs. Lou Williams, of St. Louis, survives him.

Mrs. H. B. Holbrook, Commerce. Commerce, Ga., December 25.—(Special.)—Mrs. H. B. Holbrook, nee Miss Alice McCollum, of Macon, died at her home here yesterday morning. Funeral was held today.

UNDERTAKER CAME INSTEAD OF SANTA

Preparations for Christmas Merry Making Stopped by Death.

Chicago, December 25.—An undertaker instead of Santa Claus visited the residence of John Zislola last night. Early in the day Christmas preparations had been made for three-year-old Gormond Zislola, but the child's sudden death stopped the celebration.

During the afternoon Mrs. Zislola was cleaning out a closet to make room for a Christmas tree. When she left the room the baby, seated in a high chair, reached for a bottle containing carbolic acid.

The child's screams attracted the mother, but it was too late, for she had swallowed some of the poison and died in an hour.

STRIKE IN NORTHWEST WILL SOON BE SETTLED

Both the Railroads and the Men Are Optimistic.

St. Paul, Minn., December 25.—Both the railroads and the men today were sanguine of an early settlement of the strike difficulties. Governor Elbert said that the outlook for immediate settlement was very bright.

"I have talked with several of the railroad officials," said the governor, "and believe they will be able to get together with the men over the disputed question of the reinstatement of the striking switchmen on such a basis as will be satisfactory to both sides. I have decided to call a meeting in my office at the state capitol at 11 o'clock Monday forenoon, when I firmly believe all difficulties will be disposed of."

als are not accepted. The governments ought to appoint such men. "I personally am willing to trust my country to the judgment of international judges, and I believe the Chinese imperial government will be willing to do that if other nations will consent. "The program of guaranteeing to respect undisputed national territory and sovereignty therein as a basis for a system of international justice is good. We can amend and improve any system we create as improvement becomes plain from using the system. Each nation will be best preserved by providing for a system of international justice that will preserve peace and abolish war. That is what we must keep in view as the main purpose. Go as Fast as Possible. "Then we can go in that way as fast as we find it possible to travel. If at first we cannot arbitrate all questions we can create the court of justice and arbitrate some. Then we can agree to arbitrate more. I am sure that China will prove that she is entitled to be in the first rank of the powers that wish to provide for peace and justice, and to use every means that can promote these and abolish war. "I think the United States will also be among the first to propose and to accept practical means for preserving nations' rights and international justice, as to permanent peace."

FUNERAL OF F. D. BOND IS HELD AT CANON

Prominent Merchant of That Place Committed Suicide on Thursday.

Canon, Ga., December 25.—(Special.) The funeral of F. D. Bond, the merchant who killed himself here Thursday, was held yesterday afternoon at the Baptist church.

Mr. Bond was born on September 14, 1861, and was the eldest son of the late S. P. Bond.

He was married to Miss Lillie Shiry, of Apple Valley, Jackson county, on October 18, 1901, who survives him. Three children sprang from this union, all living—Gladys, aged 7, J. Edward, aged 4, and Hazel, aged 10 months. He is also survived by three brothers—Dr. B. F. Bond, of Canon; C. Claude and J. B. Bond, of Toccoa, and five sisters, Mesdames A. J. Owens, W. R. Westmoreland, A. N. Bowers, J. W. Fleming and Cora Burton, all of Canon. He began his business career at Shoal Creek, Ga., in 1897, moving to Canon in 1903, to continue the mercantile business of his father, which was begun in 1852. Mr. Bond had been deceased and devoted, consistent member of the Baptist church since his coming to Canon, and was one of its most faithful members.

ALCOHOL AND SCISSORS USED FOR SELF MURDER

Alcohol Failed, But Scissors Did the Work for Bowden.

Hot Springs, Ark., December 25.—After drinking a pint of high-proof pure alcohol in an attempt to commit suicide, Joseph Bowden, a wealthy merchant of Salmona, Idaho, succeeded in accomplishing his purpose today by stabbing himself in the neck with a pair of scissors. Bowden drew the scissors around his throat, almost severing the head from his body.

Despondency over ill health is given as the cause of his act.

SHELDON GOES TO HIGHER COURT

Deposed President of Phenix Crosses Divide.

Sheldon Was Ill When His Irregularities Were Exposed, and He Never Knew That He Had Been Indicted in New York Courts.

Greenwich, Conn., December 25.—George Preston Sheldon, the deposed president of the Phenix (Fire) Insurance Company of Brooklyn, under indictment for grand larceny in connection with financial irregularities in the company recently exposed by the state insurance department of New York, died at his home here today, ignorant of the fact that detectives were waiting with extradition papers, ready to take him to New York for trial in the event of his recovery.

Sheldon Never Knew. At the time the affairs of the company were arranged in a statement by the New York insurance department in 1908, Sheldon lay critically ill of ptomaine poisoning, and in view of his condition details of the investigation and news of his indictment were withheld from him. He never rallied.

The trace will be planted in the Sunday school room of the church, and Miss Jimmie Irwin is chairman of the committee which has charge of old Santa Claus. James L. Mayson is chairman of the general entertainment committee.

E. F. Childress, the superintendent of the Sunday school, has worked hard on this event, and there is every indication that it will be a success. The unloading of the tree will begin at 8 o'clock.

NEGRO BRAINS MAN WITH BILLIARD CUE

Earl Swaney, of Gainesville, Is in a Serious Condition.

Gainesville, Ga., December 25.—(Special.)—Earl Swaney, a white man, was knocked in the head and perhaps mortally wounded here this morning on Athens street by a young negro named Berry Couch. Swaney is not expected to live. The negro escaped immediately after the alleged assault was committed.

The weapon used by the colored boy was a billiard cue. The white man, it is said, was at a billiard hall conducted for colored people on Athens street. Sheriff Crow is this afternoon in pursuit of the negro.

$3,000,000 A WEEK IN PENNIES BY RURAL FREE DELIVERY

No better example of the great growth and wonderful worth of the rural free delivery carriers throughout the country, and especially in the south, is to be found than in the collection recently made at Washington which shows that $3,000,000 each week is collected by this army of carriers in pennies, where they have been dropped in the box with unstamped letters, for the carriers to take, buy a stamp to place upon the letter.

P. V. DeGraw, fourth assistant postmaster general, has written to Postmaster Blodgett on this subject as follows:

"From a recent count made by rural carriers in one of the counties in the state of New York of coins deposited by patrons in their boxes for the purchase of stamp supplies, it was found that each carrier in the country was collecting an average of 115 1-cent coins each week. This average applied to all the routes in operation throughout the country would give the enormous total of about 300,000,000 1-cent coins.

"As most of these coins are deposited loose in boxes, it is desirable that you and the rural carriers, in a tactful and polite way, put forth your best efforts to induce patrons to provide themselves with stamp supplies in advance of their needs, and to equip their boxes with suitable coin-holding receptacles. It should be explained to patrons that the picking of loose coins from boxes not only results in needless hardship and delays the delivery and collection of the mails, but frequently results in actual money loss to the carriers, for if, in collecting coins from boxes, they drop them into the snow or on the ground without recovery, they are required to replace the amount out of their own funds."

BOY TOURED ON STOLEN CASH NOT KNOWING IT WAS STOLEN

Washington, December 25.—Andrew J. Campbell, a youth of 18, looking very frightened, walked into detective headquarters with his father and laid a roll of greenbacks on the desk. "I wish you'd count those," he said. The sergeant in charge thumbed them over and counted $195.

"That is what I received, not knowing it was from a robbery of the house of a man whom I know well, but in which I had no part," said young Campbell. Then he told a story of his adventures, of how he had been traveling on the booty in the south with two other boys, always riding in the drawing rooms of Pullman cars and never having less than a room and bath at the best hotels.

The house of George A. Gill, at Hyattsville, Md., was robbed on December 20 and $1,050 was stolen from a trunk. The next day, according to Campbell's story, John Williams, aged 16, invited him to go traveling with himself and another boy, Richard Peters, also 16, and see the world. Williams announced that he had won a law suit against an express company and had plenty of money. He divided $1,050 among the three, keeping $620 himself, Peters got $180 and Campbell $250.

The boys went to Richmond, Va., and from there to Rocky Mount, N. C. It was at the latter place, Campbell says, that he found to his great astonishment that the money on which he had been traveling was stolen from the home of his father's friend.

Campbell told the police that Williams admitted the robbery. Campbell came back to Washington to make a clean breast of his part, and messages were sent through the south tonight for the arrest of Williams and Peters. Campbell was locked up and his story is being investigated.

AMERICANS KIND AND KEEN, DECLARES SUFFRAGETTE LEADER

London, December 25.—Mrs. Pankhurst, the suffragette leader, summing up the results of her visit to America with some of the impressions she gained there, writes:

"I found the Americans, as a rule, kind and keen. Their women have not taken part in political affairs, but American women are more interested in social and industrial conditions than are women of the same standing here. And American women seem to realize the importance of political power, in order to carry out social reforms. So, under the surface, there is a great woman's movement here. Young women, leaving their splendid colleges, realize that despite all that is said of her advantages, the American woman is not so well off."

COMPLAINT MADE OF LEE STATUE BY WIFE'S BODY

By Some Veterans of the Federal Army. And He Holds Smoking Revolver in His Hand.

Some Are Opposed to Statue of Confederate Commander Being Placed in Statuary Hall. Not Believed Opposition Will Amount to Anything.

Washington, December 25.—(Special.)—It is too early yet to form any idea as to how far a certain element among former Union soldiers will go in their opposition to the reception on the part of congress of the statue of General Robert E. Lee, which already has its place in Statuary Hall. There is not likely to be any organized movement among the Union veterans. Only here and there do the more fiery ones let it be known that they do not relish such a statue being in the collection. Lately complaint has been made of the fact that the confederate uniform is shown in the figure, and those who do not like this say they could probably overcome their objections if this feature had been omitted by the sculptor and those who accepted the design. They forget entirely that General Lee's fame was won as a commander of the confederate forces, and however there are not many of these complaining ex-soldiers of the Union and pretty much everybody has settled down to the belief that the statue which Virginia has proffered to the nation will, in due time, be accepted by congress when the formal ceremony is arranged.

The rumour that is being raised is expected to blow over just as it did when a lot of anti-Confederate politicians endeavored to work up a religious sentiment that they hoped might make congress refuse to place in the hall the statue of Father Marquette.

That movement was led by certain congressmen up in the northwest, who imagined that they would win favor with the Protestants not to appear to think the proposition was what the politicians tried to make it, and hence the matter was dropped.

Congress invited each state to send two statues of favorite sons, and when the legislatures make the selections that ends it.

Calhoun Statue in Place.

As is well known, the last statue to reach the hall was that of John C. Calhoun, of South Carolina. It was given its place at the opening of the present session of congress, and visitors to the capital have been interested in gazing upon the marble figure that perpetuates the fame of that renowned statesman of ante-bellum days.

Compared with others among the older states, the south has fewer statues in the hall, but within the next year quite a number will be contributed. One of the earliest expected put in is that of late Senator Zeb Vance of North Carolina.

Of the new states, Idaho is the only one that has presented a statue of one of her distinguished citizens, that of the late United States Senator George L. Shoup. He was the first governor of Idaho after the state was admitted, and was one of the first senators elected. He was one of the pioneers out in the far west, and was a noted Indian fighter when the settlers were giving trouble to the white men.

Senator Shoup was born in Pennsylvania, and is remembered here as one of the most liberal-hearted men who has served in congress during the past quarter of a century.

FAMILY HAS NARROW ESCAPE FROM FIRE

Got out of House in Time to Miss Kerosene Explosion.

Mobile, Ala., December 25.—(Special.)—Wilmer Cody, his wife and four small children experienced a narrow escape from suffocation during a fire which destroyed the residence and store occupied by them at an early hour this morning. Each grabbed two children and escaped through a second-story window to an adjoining house.

A few minutes later an explosion, presumably from a tank of kerosene, shook the building from foundation to roof. The family escaped in their night robes. The stock of merchandise and household effects were totally destroyed along with about $200 in money, the receipts of Christmas eve trade.

General Carman Is Dead.

Dickinson Nears San Juan.

Washington, December 25.—The Mayflower, bearing Secretary of War Dickinson and party on the way to Porto Rico, was reported by wireless to the navy department last night about 400 miles from San Juan, where it is expected to arrive Monday morning. All on board were well.

To Stop a Cough in a Hurry.

With this recipe you can make a pint of cough remedy at home in five minutes. A few drops usually conquers the most obstinate cough. Simple as it is, no better remedy can be had at any price.

Put 2 1/2 oz. of Pinex (fifty cents worth) in a clean pint bottle, and fill up with Granulated Sugar Syrup, made as follows:

Take a pint of Granulated Sugar, add 1/2 pint of warm water and stir for 2 minutes. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours. The taste is very pleasant—children take it willingly. Splendid, too, for colds, chest pains, whooping cough, bronchitis, etc.

Granulated Sugar makes the best syrup. Pinex, as you probably know, is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway White Pine Extract. None of the weaker pine preparations will take its place. If your drug-gist hasn't the real Pinex, he can easily get it for you.

Strained honey can be used instead of the syrup, and makes a very fine honey and pine tar cough syrup.

OR GALLOWAY WAKES BY WIFE'S BODY

By Some Veterans of the Federal Army. And He Holds Smoking Revolver in His Hand.

Some Are Opposed to Statue of Confederate Commander Being Placed in Statuary Hall. Not Believed Opposition Will Amount to Anything.

Peru, Ind., December 25.—Policemen that answered a call from Ora Galloway found his wife dead upon the kitchen floor of their house and Galloway with an empty revolver in his hand early today. The furniture in the room showed there had been a fierce struggle. Galloway declared he had no consciousness of what had taken place. He is held in the jail.

In his examination by the police, Galloway said that he had been ill and that last night his wife gave him some headache medicine before he went to bed. During his illness he had been sleeping apart from her.

He knew no more, he said, until he found himself standing over her dead body. He did not know whether or not he had fired the shots that killed her. He dressed and telephoned the police.

Galloway added that his wife wished to seek an engagement on the stage and he had not encouraged her. She was 30 years old, and he is 28. They have two children, boys, 2 and 5 years old.

Galloway has been a brakeman on the Lake Erie and Western railroad.

BYSTANDER KILLED DURING STREET DUEL

Principals of Affair Not Even Hurt.

Another Spectator Was Badly Wounded—Duel Was Result of Quarrel—Shots Went Into Billiard Hall.

Moscow, Tenn., December 25.—While the two principals in a street duel here, Silman Jackson and J. B. Sherman, escaped unscathed, one bystander, Estes Harris, a youth, is dead and another, Aubrey Fortune, is badly wounded.

The shooting was the outcome of a previous quarrel, at the time thought to be trivial. Sherman, armed with a shotgun, and Jackson with a pistol, opened fire practically simultaneously, all of the bullets missing their intended mark and passing into a billiard hall, struck Fortune and Harris. Both died while lying on the ground.

High Winter Breeze Causes Some Damage to Lights in Candler Building.

The high wind which cuts the Candler building made a double shot yesterday morning and smashed two large plate-glass windows into smithereens.

One of the glasses was on the Peachtree frontage to the Central Bank and Trust Corporation, and the other was across the street in the display window of a local automobile concern.

The value of these glasses was in the neighborhood of $350. At this corner the wind cut such wild capers that it was next to impossible for a woman to cross the street and keep her hat on. Some were forced to call upon the kindly policeman on the beat to convey them from curb to curb in safety.

Reports of other glasses broken on account of the high wind were heard from over town.

But it is doubtful if at any point the wind blew with quite so much velocity as at this particular point. The effects of it, though, were felt in the neighborhood of the Grand theater, where the women had a battle with their skirts while making a flying run for the street car.

JUDGE HOWARD VAN EPS.
Sketch Made From Life for The Constitution When the Able Jurist Was Judge of the City Court.

JUDGE VAN EPS DIES SUDDENLY

Able Georgia Jurist Meets Death on a Florida Railroad Train.

Judge Howard Van Epps, ex-judge of the city court of Atlanta, and one of the best known lawyers in Georgia, died early yesterday morning on a railroad train at Lake City, Fla. Judge Van Epps left Atlanta only a few days ago to sojourn in Florida during the extreme cold weather, as he had not been in the best of health for several months.

The body was sent to Atlanta, and will reach here this morning, and will be taken to the Van Epps apartment, at the corner of West Peachtree and Third streets. The funeral arrangements will be announced later.

The deceased was about 62 years of age, and was one of the ablest jurists connected with the Atlanta bar. For eight years he was judge of the city court that is now presided over by Judge Harry Reed. He resigned in order to again resume the practice of law.

While judge he exhibited a high order of legal ability, and his decisions were rarely ever reversed by the supreme court.

After retiring from the bench he wrote several law books that occupy today a place in every high-standing law library in the country. Among those books were "Van Epps' Digest of the Supreme Court," "Atkins and Van Epps' Digest," and a "Supplement to the Code of 1895."

Judge Van Epps served at one time with credit to himself and the college as president of the board of trustees of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Judge Van Epps is survived by a son, George W. Van Epps; a daughter, Miss Minnie Van Epps, who is now visiting her aunt, Mrs. Carleton Hillyer, in Augusta, and a sister, Mrs. E. A. Minor, the wife of the city councilman.

President Alex W. Smith requests all the members of the Atlanta Bar Association to attend the funeral of Judge Van Epps in a body. He said it was impossible to reach the members of the association on account of yesterday being a holiday.

The American Salvation Army will have open house on Whitehall street, at Fair, today from 12 to 3 o'clock for the white newsmen of Atlanta. The bill of fare will show turkey, barbecue meats of three kinds, salads, cranberry sauce, oysters and hot coffee. Adjutant Morris will be in charge, while the ladies will serve the kids.

APPELLATE COURT HAS FUN WITH CIRCUS AUTO CASE

The most serious of courts will sometimes indulge a sense of humor. In a decision which the state court of appeals has just rendered in the case of the Great Cosmopolitan Shows et al. v. H. A. Petty—that's the way the case appeals in the appellate court—Petty, who was driving an automobile on the streets of Dawson, had an accident, the responsibility of which he put upon the Great Cosmopolitan Shows, which were exhibiting there, and brought suit for $50 repairs. The superior court overruled a demurrer filed by the show company, and upon trial Petty secured a verdict for $50, which the court of appeals has sustained.

In opening the decision, which was rendered by Judge Arthur G. Powell, the court states:

"To state the plaintiff's testimony, as gathered from the brief of evidence: He was 'traveling east; he had approached 'Lee and Stonewall,' had gone through the narrow space to the right of the 'Ghost Show,' had passed between the 'Snakes' and the 'Crazy House,' and was trying to pass in front of the 'Holy City,' when the accident happened."

The court then explains that this was not a case of delirium tremens nor of initiation into secret orders, but a case of a man trying to pass along the streets of Dawson, which were partly occupied by the attractions of a street carnival, and continues:

"It was after nightfall; it is contrary to certain familiar traditions there was no light on either the inside or the outside of the 'Holy City.' His automobile came in contact with certain gypsies and tentpins (appurtenances of the 'Holy City') which were in the side decision of the court takes a little shot at petty juries:

"We know of no better tribunal," it says, "than a petty jury to solve the questions of negligence and contributory negligence growing out of a transaction ex delicto, between an automobile and a circus."

HOW CHRISTMAS WAS SPENT BY GOV. JOSEPH M. BROWN

Governor Brown on Saturday granted a requisition to the officers of Pope county, Florida, to return with him a man who gives the name of J. B. Chancey, and whom the officers claim is wanted there for issuing worthless checks, representing himself to be with a firm which denies any connection with him.

In support of their contention, Governor Brown was shown proofs to the effect that similar operations had been carried on successfully in Alabama and Georgia as well.

Chancey came into prominence recently by surrendering to the officers in the state of Kansas and declaring himself to be wanted in Walton county. He was brought back to Georgia at the expense of Walton county, only to have it learned that he was not the man he claimed to be.

But, from the action of the Florida officials, it would seem that he has jumped out of the frying pan and into the fire. Governor Brown heard the requisition papers Christmas, to keep the officials from being forced to remain in the city until Monday.

Governor Brown and his family had Christmas dinner at the mansion last night. During the afternoon they received many callers and intimate friends.

In addition to the silver service presented to the governor Friday night from friends, not only in the capitol, but from all over the state as well, the governor received quite a number of presents from personal friends of long standing. Among these was a knife from Dr. White, his pastor, bearing the familiar legend: "If you love me like I love you, no knife can cut our love in two."

Thus Watson wins the suit although upon the absolute merits of the case, the supreme court had given a decision against him.

Watson claimed that he not only did not acknowledge service upon the bill of exceptions, but that he did not even know the case had been carried to the supreme court, and that lacking notice he was unable to be represented there to present his case.

FROM EARTH ENDS, from Europe and the Orient, from "effete monarchies and from the newest-born republic," all nature-touched humanity are being cast into the melting-pot together, at this the Christmas time.

It is the converging time of today's and yesterday's, and the "white light of the days to come," when men and women turn from the "dust of conflict," and youth follows in their trail, to claim a citizenship in the kingdom where Love rules, and every heart plays a kingly part, and shares the kingly crown.

"HOPE, FAITH AND LOVE," these three old-fashioned jewels continue to adorn such a diadem, as of old.

The "great new thing," yet undiscovered, may lurk in the "Whither, the Whence, the Where," to supplant, but let us seek deliverance from such abdication.

The world ideal of Christmas Spirit—peace and love at home, and good-will to all the world—will continue to prevail "as long as grass grows, and water runs."

Where all are workers together, there are no lookers on—no builders of antitheses.

BLUE CHRISTMAS FOR CLERKS

IN NEW YORK CUSTOM HOUSE

New York, December 25.—It is a blue Christmas for many of the clerks employed at the New York customs brokers—a sum never equaled in the history of the order recently issued, forbidding employees to accept gifts of any kind from outsiders.

For a number of years it has been the practice of the custom house brokers to make amusements presents to members of the clerical force. In most cases it was a box of cigars, but frequently it took the shape of a generous check. Under the new regime, however, this is all over, and the penalty for accepting gratuities is dismissal.

RICH CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

FOR THE CHICAGO WORKERS

Chicago, December 25.—Millions of dollars as Christmas gifts for Chicago workers—a sum never equaled in the city's history, distributed by business houses, manufacturers and other enterprises—is the record for Christmas, 1909.

The big concerns alone increased the great total in Chicago by little short of a million, through their profuse sharing plans. Half-a-million, distributed by the International Harvester Company, approximately $400,000 by the R. T. Crane Company—these instances tell only a part of the story.

Many of the banks and other institutions also joined in the distribution of cash gifts.

SNAPPY CHRISTMAS WEATHER

PREVAILED IN NEW ENGLAND

Boston, Mass., December 25.—Bright, snappy Christmas weather prevailed in the greater part of New England today and gave added inspiration to the cheerful work of making other people happy.

It was a green Christmas except in the northern part of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

It was a kindly Christmas to rich and poor. The uniform prosperity of the past year added much to the farmer's worldly goods, while never before in this section of the country has there been such beautiful charity toward those less fortunate in life.

LOADS OF CHRISTMAS MAIL

FOR MEN OF ATLANTIC FLEET

New York, December 25.—It requires a big two-horse wagon each day to carry the holiday mail that arrives in New York for the officers and men of the Atlantic fleet. In the consignment that awaited them upon their arrival here there were one or more presents for practically every man in the fleet, while the fancy post cards conveying Christmas greetings from relatives and friends were more than 10,000 in number.

Today the ships were full of Christmas cheer, and as well as solid. Throughout the morning the generous Christmas dinner that the government provides was in preparation on each ship. There was a big fat turkey for every six men and about 8,000 plum puddings and mince pies, topped off with cigars and cigarettes and all the ice cream and fruits that the men could possibly eat.

The football game for the championship of the fleet will be played on New Year's day. A series of championship basketball games also will take place during the coming week.

TRAGEDY ROBS BABY BOY OF ALL CHRISTMAS JOY

New Orleans, December 25.—Because his wife had expressed a desire to go to her parents' home to spend Christmas, James J. Blakeley, 35 years old, a railroad foreman, shot her several times with a revolver and then killed himself at their home in Algiers today.

Responding to the appeals of the little 4-year-old son of the couple, neighbors went to the house and found both Blakeley and his wife lying dead on the floor. The child told them the story of the quarrel, which led up to the tragedy.

DOG PROPERTY IN GEORGIA, SAYS THE APPELLATE COURT

Property rights in the dog in Georgia are fully sustained by a decision of the state court of appeals.

The court holds that the wanton killing of a dog by a railroad train makes the railroad company liable for payment for the value of the animal so killed.

It seems that Bob Keel's dog was killed by a train on the Southern railway running through Gordon county. Bob declared his dog was worth $50 and brought the case to the state court for the amount. He secured a verdict for $17.50, which was sustained by the superior court and the railroad company brought the case up to the court of appeals.

In sustaining the action of the lower court in finding for Keel, the court of appeals says:

"There being evidence that, though the dog of the plaintiff was upon the railroad track for about a minute before it was struck by the train, and was in full view of the engineer for half a mile, it was engineer's duty to stop the train at full speed without sounding any alarm or making any other effort to prevent the killing of the dog, the jury was authorized to find that the killing was authorized or intentional. The verdict is, therefore, not contrary to law."

All of which is a reminder that the new state law putting a tax of $1 on each dog owned in the state, is about to become effective.

In 1910 every Georgian who owns a dog must pay the state a tax of $1 on it, or take the chance of the sheriff levying upon it for taxes.

This constitutes an additional recognition on the part of the state of a person's property rights in a dog, but just how far that recognition will be pleasing to the owners of dogs in Georgia remains to be seen.

There are numerous estimates as to what the dog tax will bring, running all the way from the pessimistic view which puts it around $4,000 up to the more cheerful opinion, from the standpoint of the state at least, which puts it at $100,000 and even more. It is a problem which another year will solve.

Many Poor People Were Fed. Macon, Ga., December 25.—(Special.)—Captain Louis Coleman of the Salvation Army, made more poor people happy this Christmas than were ever served by him before. More than 800 persons enjoyed the fruits of the army labors. Tickets were given out to worthy families and many poor children had donations that were substantial. Captain Coleman had worked up a large fund that was judiciously spent and distributed.

SPLENDID INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL PLANNED BY THREE DISTRICTS IN BEN HILL COUNTY

1. J. R. Prentiss, School Commissioner of Ben Hill County. 2. The Old Building Which the Stone House Replaces. 3. The New, $25,000 School Building.

Fitzgerald, Ga., December 25.—(Special.)—The dedication of the new school building at Lynwood, 2 miles northwest of Fitzgerald, which occurred Friday, December 17, was an event which scored one more point in the advancement of education and industrial training in particular, in south Georgia.

Three school districts, Mayview, Arbor and Oak Ridge, have combined and erected a centrally located two-story, stone building, containing an auditorium, three school rooms and the necessary cloak rooms, at a cost of $25,000.

Of this amount the people of these districts donated $1,000. The building is located on a 5-acre tract, the ground being laid out in plots.

Flowers will beautify many of these, but the largest number will be reserved for the planting of grain and other seeds by the pupils as an experiment in the raising of various products.

The ambition of this exceedingly energetic and enthusiastic community is to establish an industrial school at this point, and certainly the most hopeful pessimist can see that their hopes are all but realized. The five acres of land were donated by Mr. Sidney Clark, with the promise of ten or fifteen more if the school was a success. There is no question but that Mr. Clark will have an opportunity to more than double his first act of generosity.

There are at present 112 pupils, with the prospect of at least 150 after the holidays. Three teachers are employed, the school having been opened on October 1. One hundred volumes form the nucleus of a future library. State School Commissioner Jere M. Pound was present at the dedication and addressed the large assembly. Another address was given by Professor Thomas A. Early, of the United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C. Mr. Early is at present with the State Agricultural College at Athens.

The last talk was given by Ben Hill's county school commissioner, R. J. Prentiss, who has no doubt been the moving spirit in the accomplishment of this laudable effort.

Two other districts in the northern part of the county, the Vaughn-Taylor district, have combined and erected a two-room building and have an attendance of 100 pupils. The Troup district has raised by subscription $1,500, which they will put with an equal amount from the county funds and follow the example set by the Lynwood district, establishing their school on the lines of an agricultural school.

Peary at the Pole.

What must be one's sensations at the North Pole? Since the return of Commander Peary from boreal center many persons have asked this question. In the current number of Hampton's Magazine Peary begins his own story of his voyage and discovery. It is by far the most extraordinary story of adventure ever published. Arriving at the Pole, according to the story, Peary's first and most overpowering desire was for rest.

"But," he writes, "after two or three hours of absolutely fatigue-imposed sleep, a state of mental exaltation made further rest impossible. For more than a score of years that mathematical point's surface had been the object of my every effort. To attain it I had devoted my whole being, physical, mental and moral; had risked my life a hundred times and the lives of those who had been glad to take the chances with me; had given all my own money and the money of my friends."

Standing at the very root of his planet, every direction was new. He remembered his repeated efforts to reach this isolated, mysterious spot and willed that he should succeed. There is a poignant note in this hardy man's account of his defeat—a note which lends the elements of tragedy and romance.

"I remembered that day, three years before, April 21, 1906," he writes, "when after a heart-breaking fight with the ice, the open water, and storms, I had been obliged to turn back from 75 degrees because my supply of food could carry me no farther; and I contemplated my terrible depression of that time with the exhilaration of the present hours. During the reaction of that return journey in 1906, I had told myself that I was only one of a long list of Arctic explorers, dating back three or four centuries, from Henry Hudson to the Duke D'Abruzzi, and including Franklin, Kane and Melville. A long list of valiant men who had striven and failed; of whom I told myself that I had only a few knots in the seemingly endless string that leads from the parallels of civilization to the polar center. The mere writing of a name a little higher up has never had any attraction for me. I could not be content without the work, and final accomplishment of the work."

"And on April 6, 1909, while quartering the ice in every direction from my camp and taking my observations, I tried to realize that after twenty-three years of struggles and discouragements, some or other to be written down, I had at last succeeded in placing the flag of my distant country at the goal of the world's desire."

It is not easy to write about such things; but I knew that I was going back to civilization with the last of the great earth stories—a story that the world had been waiting to hear for nearly four hundred years, a story which was to be told at last under the folds of the Stars and Stripes, the flag that during my lonely and isolated life had come to mean to me the symbol of home and everything I loved—and might never see again.

"The future may give us thrilling stories of the conquest of the air," he concludes, "but the discovery of the North Pole is the sign of man's final physical conquest of the earth. There are now no more primeval stories to be told."

BY THEIR TIES

Curious Mode Used by Ticket-Taker.

Doorkeeper of Theater Always Looked at Necktie, and Remembered Patrons by That. Londoner Is Conspicuous for Variety of His Neckwear.

London, December 25.—(Special.)—When, some years ago, one of the doorkeepers at a London theater retired from his draughty calling and was pensioned off by the management, it appeared that this old man, in all the years of his service, had never given a "pass-out" check to any one of the thousands of men who must have passed his doorway.

But he never made a mistake. No one entitled to return was ever refused and no one could pass in at the end of the interval who had not passed out at the beginning of it.

The secret of the old man's success was a curious one. He depended on his memory entirely, but he had trained his memory in a very curious way. He did not remember the men by their faces, their clothes, their hats, their boots, or by any peculiarity of gait or appearance. Manifestly such a feat would have been impossible, for ordinary "pitties" are very much alike in these details.

Standardized Londoner.

He took the one detail on which men do differ, and remembered them by that—he recognized them by their neckties.

Gaze around you in the railway carriage as you are reading this article and ask yourself if there is any one of your fellow-passengers that you could remember well enough to recognize again in, say, an hour's time.

You will find there are very few people you could be sure of. There may be one old man with a large and conspicuous white beard or a very young man with a pair of spectacles of unusual size; but nine out of ten have the same sort of hat, the same sort of clothes, and the same sort of figure.

The Londoner, in fact, seems to be standardized. He is built on a settled pattern. He is modelled to a type. His necktie is his sole bit of variety.

Into this world of standardized human beings come, let us say, a colonial. Mighty Londoner, with her vast crowd swarming over four continents, swallows him up. Yet, somehow, he preserves his individuality. He is conspicuous wherever he goes. He feels that all London is staring at him, and all London, as far as it has time, is staring at him.

Sighted Afar Off.

Cabmen persistently hail him; the map sellers in the Strand peer him as he passes; the very street people—the "confidence" men—sight him afar off. But it is not his necktie that distinguishes him, nor his face, nor his clothes, nor his walk. The conspicuous feature of the newly-arrived colonial's outfit is his hat.

London permits three sorts of hat—the top-hat, the bowler, and the summer straw. Any break from this settled order is to make yourself conspicuous.

The colonial in his broad-brimmed soft felt hat does not belong to the ordered picture; but directly he conforms to the regulations and buys himself a London hat, he merges with the rest of the millions and his individuality goes.

It is all a matter of the hat. Let your most hardened Londoner array himself in a broad-brimmed felt and walk along the Strand, and he will enjoy all the sensations of a new arrival.

Mysterious people will come forward anxious to show him around; friendly omnibus drivers will point out the sights of the city as they pass, and everybody will smile a welcome to him as if to wish him joy on his London holiday.

Cr, again, let him wear the little round hat, which everybody knows as "the American." Your Londoner, so attired, will be on the edge of many adventures that he would never have suspected his city of offering. London will give him a welcome such as he has never known.

Everybody will give him the "glad eye," and cabmen will charge him double fare. Volunteer guides to London will drop from the skies. The hat is their signal.

When You Are Hypnotized.

Owing to recent sensational news items, the American public is beginning to take an extraordinary interest in hypnotism and hypnotists. Hypnotism, supplies an extended account both the normal and abnormal phases of hypnotism, which will be welcomed by all students of psychic research. Here is a description of how the world looks to the hypnotized subject.

"The hypnotic state exalts the intellectual and moral faculties. In this state the subject can read the thoughts of those around him, especially of the man who has hypnotized him. He has the phenomena of 'transposition of the senses.' That is, he may smell with his elbow, see with his shoulder blade, etc. He hears and answers without any one having spoken. He sees through opaque substances, as walls, and for greater or less distance, according to conditions in himself and in the operator. Metals have a peculiar influence upon him; gold placed against his skin, or against his externalized phantoms, burns him; copper brings him up out of his lethargy into the lighter sleep called somnambulism; lead suffocates him. If a sick person takes hold of his hand while he is in the lethargic state, some of the sick person's malady can be transferred into the hypnotized man."

"The hypnotized person, just before awakening, is told that there is nothing the matter with him and thus escapes the illness transferred. What probably happens is that the sick person is charged with some of the hypnotized subject's nervous energy and, under the right conditions, this is always beneficial."

"The hypnotized man has, in varying degrees, the faculties of clairvoyance and prophecy. As for what he sees—and this must be noted in the case of de Rochas' subject—it is always impregnated with light rays, something like X-rays. He can see inside his own body; all along the routes of his nerves he sees canals of light. The men around him frequently look like shadowy segments of the Milky Way. From the ends of the fingers of the man who has hypnotized him he sees long projections of phosphorescent blazes. Everything in nature, man, animal, plant or mineral, is resplendent for him with this miraculous fire in varying degrees, as the object varies in vitality, and as the man who has hypnotized him makes passes over it."

FARMER'S EASIEST MONEY IS IN RAISING POTATOES, SAYS HON. D. A. POPE

Home of Hon. D. A. Pope, Near Buchanan, Ga.

Buchanan, Ga., December 25.—(Special.)—One of the most progressive farmers in Haralson county is Hon. D. A. Pope, who lives 6 miles west of this place at his beautiful country home.

Mr. Pope is not interested in any special crop, but raises almost everything that will grow in this country, and that is almost everything that will grow anywhere.

Near his home is a large Bermuda pasture, divided into tracts for cattle, hogs and sheep. He keeps cattle enough to eat all that is made on his farm suitable for that purpose, adding to his herd when his neighbors feed runs short or they get overstocked, and selling his when ready for market or to sell at a good price for milk cows. He raises from twenty-five to thirty head of hogs a year that usually weigh from 250 to 300 pounds at 12 months old.

Up-to-date Machinery. By keeping up-to-date machinery, etc., he is able to make good crops, regardless of seasons. This year we had so much rain in the spring it seemed almost impossible to make a crop, but by not having too much to the hand, having the land well prepared and the machinery he used, he was able to keep his crop worked well—enough to make more than a bale to the acre on some of his cotton crop, fine corn, wheat, oats and peavine hay.

Money in Irish Potatoes. Mr. Pope states that the easiest money he makes is on Irish potatoes. He measured one acre this year, kept an account of his work, fertilizer, seed and all other expenses, which amounted ad to less than $20. Made a little over 100 bushels of potatoes; that he sold for $1 per bushel and had more demand for them when all were sold than when he first began selling.

Mr. Pope is also successfully raising a family of eleven children, that are large enough to help him on his farm.

Growth of Universities.

(From The Knoxville Sentinel.) A comparison of the enrollment of students in the larger American universities and colleges shows that Columbia is easily maintaining the recent lead. It now has 6,132 students registered and Harvard only 5,558. Harvard shows signs of dropping behind Chicago, which has 5,487. Harvard indeed does not want any more students than it now has. Including summer session registration, the first ten universities show the following registration this year and last year:

1. Columbia	1908	1909
2. Harvard	5,558	5,675
3. Chicago	5,487	5,342
4. Michigan	5,259	5,114
5. Cornell	5,028	5,188
6. Pennsylvania	4,857	4,700
7. Illinois	4,502	4,555
8. Minnesota	4,251	4,400
9. Wisconsin	4,245	4,607
10. California	4,084	3,876

Without the summer session registration the attendance rank of the universities is somewhat different. Yale drops to eleventh place, Chicago to fifteenth, Princeton to twenty-third. But the distinction between the summer and the winter sessions is rapidly losing its importance. The summer session has come to stay, offering am-

AT THE THEATERS

"A Gentleman From Mississippi"

At the Grand Opera House tomorrow night and for the entire week, with Wednesday and Saturday matinees, "A Gentleman From Mississippi" will be seen for the first time in this city, with a notable cast under the management of William A. Brady and Joseph R. Grismer.

This includes such well-known players as Robert A. Fisher, Hans Robert, W. F. Canfield, William Forestelle, Arthur H. Ebbetts, James Gordon, Ernest Evers, Harry DeForest, Louise deRigny, Leah Baird, Jane Fearnley, Sophie Peters and Jane Oatey. It comes here with a record of one solid year in New York and six months in Chicago.

"A Gentleman From Mississippi" tells a quaint, but logical story of the arrival of a new senator in Washington in the belief that every man who sits in the congress is bent on serving his country. He tells his tale to young "Bud" Haines, who "covers" the news of the capital for a great New York city daily; and the story, knowing reporter laughs at the man of forty years who has resided on a plantation and who thinks he can do a patriotic duty in the senate without let or hindrance.

Senior Langdon introduces the gifted reporter to the two Langdon girls, and then "Bud" Haines begins to think seriously of accepting a proposition to become the older man's private secretary. He at length does accept, and proceeds to teach the older man the way the game is played and the way it sometimes can be beaten. And one of the daughters aids in playing the game young Haines' way, and the other laughter aids in playing it the other way, to her father's grief, her own undoing, and the general dismay of young Haines, who had thought her a goddess. That this is one of the notable comedies of the age may be gained from the fact that it ran all last season in New York city, for twenty-two weeks in Chicago, and that it outlasted every other play of the season in the former city, although it was put forward with no other claim than that it was a comedy of American life and character. When it is said that it ran all season, it is not meant that it ran four months, or six months, or through a conspicuous part of the theatrical year, which is from September 1 to April 30. "A Gentleman From Mississippi" was on view continuously in New York from the time of its first September production there, a week after it was originally made known in Washington, D. C., until mid-June, when it was transferred from the Bijou theater to the roof of the auditorium of the New Amsterdam theater, where it ran throughout the hot weather, being reransferred to the Bijou for the resumption of the run.

It is "A Gentleman From Mississippi" which Mr. Roosevelt, who presided, described as "perfectly corking; bully, a ripper!" and which has had the expressed approval of every important man and woman who has seen the comedy in either its New York or Chicago or Boston runs.

"The Round-Up." Klaw & Erlanger's production of Edmund Day's western drama, "The Round-Up," will be the offering at the Grand for an entire week, beginning January 3. The indications are that during the engagement of this piece in this city there will be capacity audiences at every performance.

The battle scene in the third act is a stupendous stage effect, the like of which has never been seen before. The appearance of the twenty mounted Indians riding along a ledge of rock far above the stage level is a thrill indeed, but it is far surpassed in the incident at the end of the act, where "Slim" Hoover, the sheriff, and a troop of cowboys are shown riding bucking bronchos. This, too, is a novelty never before seen in what is termed an indoor attraction. To effect this, Klaw & Erlanger were obliged to have made a great cocoa matting, weighing many tons, which covers the entire stage. This mat is 4 inches thick and makes possible to ride a bucking horse with perfect safety to horse and rider.

The "Round-Up" is said by many who have spent a great part of their lives on the western plains to be a picture of southwestern Arizona as days when General Crook was pursuing Conchias in the fastnesses of the bad lands on the borders of Mexico. Matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday.

At the Lyric. Theatergoers have invariably taken kindly to a theatrical entertainment that includes plenty of good, whole some comedy, interspersed with catchy songs and lively music. Such an entertainment comes to the Lyric this week, for George Sidney and his big company are booked to appear here on Thursday. This is Mr. Sidney's eighth season as a musical comedy star, and he has been one of the most successful attractions that has been sent on the road by E. D. Stair. Several years ago Mr. Sidney created a character—that of a funny little chap in the new comedy, "The Joy Rider." Mr. Sidney's interpretation of the part is not a reflection upon any class of citizens, nor is it an exaggerated caricature. Audiences laugh with Sidney instead of at him, and his performance is at all times refined and a distinct characterization of himself. In the selection of his supporting company Mr. Sidney has had the pick of some of the best farce comedy artists in the country. The ladies of the chorus are said to be young, pretty and possessing talents, and they appear in all of the ensemble numbers.

At the Bijou. The promise of an extraordinary bill was fulfilled last week at the Bijou, where the largest crowds of the year found the Christmas offering one of the most satisfactory and amusing entertainments in the city. Despite the fact that the past week is considered usually very bad for the theaters, the Bijou did its usual good business, and on Christmas afternoon and night the theater was not large enough to accommodate the crowds. The reputation of the Bijou has traveled to all parts of the state, and in consequence this is the first place of amusement that is sought out by strangers in the city.

For this week a splendid line of vaudeville has been booked, consisting of song and dance, a musical act, eccentric comedy sketches, athletic act, and other stunts that will be especially interesting to patrons of the Bijou. Charles Yorkie, the comedy musician; Lawrence and Wolcott, singers and dancers; Henry Rickard, in a novelty ring act; Lovett and Falls, in a comedy sketch, will make up the vaudeville part of the entertainment. Arthur Barr will have several new illustrated songs to render, and the splendid Big Motion pictures will open and close the performances.

The Bijou will open its forty-fifth week of continuous vaudeville Monday afternoon with the brightest prospects of its career.

Matinees will be given every afternoon at 2:30 and 4. Night performances at 7:30 and 9.

At the Orpheum.

New Year week at the Orpheum will bring a combination of real vaudeville talent to the popular theater that gives promise of being quite above the standard of that pacemaker in the offering of vaudeville in the south.

There will be seven numbers, not including the exclusive motion pictures that are used in the Orpheum, and from first to last there is not the slightest suggestion of confusion, but there is greater novelty than any past bill has promised.

There will be good, clean comedy, singing and dancing, and novelty enough to rest the most tired being imaginable. There will be pretty stage mountings, good music and a suggestion of sensation that always serves as a good dressing for any bill of vaudeville.

There are a number of features on the bill. In fact, every act is a real star, for the management sent along the command to finish the old year and start the new year with the best talent possible to secure. It is a combination Christmas gift and New Year present from the Orpheum to its multitude of supporters.

The famous Les Dumonds, the wonderfully clever Parisian street singers, will be one of the features. This trio of vocalists and musicians were imported about the time of the famous "advance vaudeville" movement, and are just completing their American engagements. The number promises to be one of the most pleasing the Orpheum has ever offered. J. K. Murray and Clara Lane, the famous comic opera stars, who have been more than successful in polite vaudeville, will offer another feature dumber. The duo will become decidedly popular, and their "A Quiet Honeymoon" will be classed with the successes of vaudeville in Atlanta. "A One Night Stand" is the title of a screaming funny comedy that will be offered by the Three Lightnings, in which a new interest in singing and dancing will be created. And Zeno, Jordan and Zeno, the serial comedy gymnasts, will contribute the same act that elevated the trio to the position of headliners of all comedy acrobatic headliners. Christy and Willis, in a combination of eccentric dancing and comedy juggling. Misses Russell and Church, in a novelty comic creation, and the famous ice sculptor, Marianni, make up the bill. There will be the regular performances all week, including matinees daily, and a big special matinee next Saturday, New Year's day.

Have a Drink "On the House"

You get from 15 to 18 drinks "on the house" in every gallon of whiskey you buy from us. The price of that many drinks represents about what we save you.

You see most of our business comes to us unsolicited—re-orders from satisfied customers.

This cuts down our selling expense, on all the business we do, to about 20 per cent. While the selling expense of most houses runs as high as 60 per cent.

We give you, in lower prices—in "drinks on the house"—all that we save in selling expense. We are satisfied with a small profit.

9 Out of 10 Want More

88 per cent of our business consists of re-orders.

That's pretty strong proof of how good our whiskeys are. No man would continue to buy of us if he wasn't well satisfied.

The house of I. H. Oppenheim Co. is well known among good judges of good whiskey throughout the whole South. Last year, over 126,000 men ordered of us.

Only the Choicest Goods

We handle only the choicest old whiskeys—straight distilled goods of absolute purity.

During our 17 years in business, we've never sold a drop of "manufactured" or "doctored" liquor.

Our Mistletoe Rye at $4.00 for 4 quarts, is as fine a whiskey as any man ever put to his lips.

We don't think that any man can get better whiskey than this, no matter how much he may be willing to pay.

Or take our Dewtry at $2.80. It's really a surprise at the price—a marvel of smoothness and goodness.

We know of goods not a bit better selling at twice what we ask for this.

CIRCUS STAYS HERE FOR ANOTHER WEEK

Rhoda Royal Show Will Again Delight Atlantans.

That big, meritorious, professional circus, the Rhoda Royal Two-Ring Circus, Roman Hippodrome and Wild West, which proved such a pleasing surprise to the Atlanta public, and which played all last week at the Auditorium-Armory, has made arrangements to continue its engagement Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Friday and Saturday, Thursday the circus will not give exhibitions, as the Auditorium has another attraction that day.

The prices: 50 and 75 cents. No seats reserved except the boxes, which will sell for 75 cents. Matinee prices will be 25 cents in all parts of the building.

A two-dollar show for "four bits." And it's a great circus, too. It's the best circus that ever came to Atlanta, and to use the expression of a newspaper man, "getting down to brass tacks, it's the best circus that ever struck a spark in the heart of childhood or renewed the spark of childhood in the heart of a grown-up."

That's the strongest indorsement any amusement proposition has ever received in this city, and some mighty good shows have visited the Gate City.

It's a great big circus, as clean as any theatrical performance, moving along prettily, each act seeming more better than the one preceding, and all of their mighty pleasing and mighty clever. Don't get the idea that it's a small circus, because it isn't, not in the quantity of the acts or the quality, or the number of performers it takes to put them on.

Best Big Circus Acts.

The amusement-loving public has been told already that the best features of the Barnum & Bailey circus, the Ringling Shows, the Sells Brothers, Forepaugh Shows, the Cella-Floto circus have been secured by the Rhoda Royal winter circus. This is true. There's the Segrist family—probably the kings, bearing one queen among them, of daring aerialists. They put on a flying trapeze stunt that is the greatest act of its kind in the world, barring none. The stunt of all stunts in this act is the double somersault. One of the noted family while flying through the air, to be caught after completing the second turn by the hands of another member of this family hanging head downward on another flying trapeze. This feat is performed by the king of aerialists, while encased in a sack, two poles in which to allow his arms to come through. The act is a stunner.

There's novelty in plenty—amazing novelty. There's Mile. Nadje, billed as the English Venus, who looks the part to perfection. Wonderful Nadje, with her wonderful looks, wonderful grace and quite a series of wonderful stunts.

There's a contortionist, too, who is one contortionist. Listen! Here's one thing he does that's worth seeing: With his chin resting on the tip of a revolving contraption, he doubles over backward and sits on his own head! Now, what do you know about that? It's true, just the same, and if you don't believe it, just take a run down to the Auditorium-Armory Monday night, put up 50 cents and see for yourself.

Some Features of the Show.

There's an aggregation of really truly, honest-to-goodness funny clown, headed by Silvers, or some body that looks awfully and comically like him.

CORNELL MUSICAL CLUBS AT AUDITORIUM THURSDAY

Members of the Cornell Musical Clubs to be heard at the Auditorium Thursday evening.

The Cornell Musical Clubs, which will visit seven of the larger cities of the south and east this year on their annual Christmas tour, have been a continuous organization since 1887. It is only in the past dozen years, however, that the membership of the clubs has been as large as it is now or that they have taken such extensive trips. About 60 men are taken on tour this year.

There has been a glee club at Cornell since about 1870. The students of those early days appear to have had some good singers, but they lacked the perfect organization of the present clubs. To judge by the college papers of that period, rehearsals seemed to have been largely a matter of chance except just before a concert. Nowadays the rehearsals of the musical clubs begin in September, and are a regular thing until the college closes in June. The men work hard, too. It is considered such an honor "to make"

and quite the best trained horses Atlanta has ever seen—sleek, lithic, clean-limbed animals whose motions are the height of grace—horses that two-step, waltz, make a desperate stab at the hooches-hooches, play chimes, do an accompaniment to a pretty song, race, rear and perform a large number of unbelievable feats.

The performance concludes with a hippodrome and wild west that would put Buffalo Bill to shame, just as the circus feature should do with the greatest show on earth and ten big shows combined.

There were those present Monday night who said the New York Hippodrome never offered anything as pleasing—those who, said Madison Square Garden couldn't offer any better.

But whether or no, it's beyond question the most pleasing circus entertainment that ever drifted this way, and it's worth while once, twice and a trio of times.

The Auditorium seems built for the Rhoda Royal circus, and the Fifth regiment and the Boys' Club, for whose benefit the circus is showing, had it fixed up in jam-up style. It was well heated, well ushered and well—everything else.

It'll be at the Auditorium for matinees every day and performances every night, and the man or woman who doesn't go along and take his little ones or somebody else's little ones, ought to be arrested for cruelty to children.

Graft Is Unprofitable.
(From The Piano Star-Courier.)
A stranger was robbed of $14 by a couple of smooth guys at Fort Worth this week. They took him to the post office, showed him the clerks at work, told him the clerks were placing bets on horse races, and induced him to bet $1, which they "placed" for him, returning in a short time with $3, telling him he had "won" $2. They then induced him to let them place $15, took the money, and skidded. He was then sympathetic for the victim. In the first place he, was so green his wife ought to have kept him at home; again, he was himself too eager to get something for nothing.

Those bunko steers deserve the severest reprehension of course; but their originality and audacity deserve some sort of recognition. Their talents, if honestly and energetically directed, would win them wealth and eminence in business. But the born gaffer scorns work, courts imprudence, and almost invariably lives in precarious poverty, and dies miserably.

SPECIAL XMAS SERVICE ARRANGED FOR SUNDAY

Special Christmas services will be held at the Central Congregational church Sunday morning and evening. The subject of the pastor's sermon the morning service will be "Unto You This Day a Savior is Born." At the evening service, which will be interspersed with appropriate Christmas music, he will deliver an address, taking for his subject "Heralds of a King." Following is the musical program as arranged:

MORNING, 11:45.
Prelude, Offertory in A—Battiste.
"There Were Shepherds," Miss Hays and choir—E. L. Ashford.

"The New-Born King" (solo for soprano), Miss Mamie Adel Hays—J. E. Poir.

Postlude, Finale in E—Cappocci.
EVING, 7.
Prelude, Festival Piece—Liebig.
"Gloria" from the Twelfth Mass—Mozart.

Hallelujah Chorus, from "The Messiah"—G. F. Handel.
Postlude, March in G—Smart.
The quartet will be assisted by twenty-six trained voices. Professor J. Gordon Moore, pianist, and Professor J. J. Robbins, organist.

The Central Congregational church on Ellis street, opposite Carnegie Library, extends to the public, and especially strangers and commercial travelers who may be in the city, a cordial invitation to attend these special services, as well as all services of the church. Seats free.

RECORDS ARE BROKEN
BY BARNEY OLDFIELD

Two New Marks Set by the Auto Driver at Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, Cal., December 25.—In a five-mile race at Ascot Park today between Oldfield in his Benz, and Kercher in the Darraq, Oldfield broke the world's record for five miles in a competitive event, traversing the distance in 4:31.

Oldfield, driving his Benz car in a race against time, lowered the track record for a mile to 2:35 seconds.
The former record was 2:38, made by Hughes in a Christie.

BRYN MAWR GETS $7,000
FOR SWIMMING POOL

All Undergraduate Girls Required to Qualify as Swimmers.

Philadelphia, Pa., December 25.—Bryn Mawr college, the fashionable educational institution for girls, announced today that a gift of $7,000 had been received from one of the alumni of the college, Miss Cynthia M. Wesson, of Springfield, Mass.

As Miss Wesson, who was graduated in 1900, was prominent in the athletic affairs of the institution, her gift was to be expended toward the betterment of the college swimming pool. All undergraduate girls are required to qualify as swimmers and this is one of the most popular of the college sports.

4 HORSES FINISH
CLOSE BUNCHChristmas Day Handicap at Oakland Exciting.Boggs Wins by a Neck From Edwin T. Fryer—Great Demonstration Greeted Victory of Boggs—Silver Knight Was Third.

Oakland, Cal., December 25.—Boggs again distinguished himself at Emeryville today by winning the Christmas handicap. The son of Royal Flush had already established himself as the idol of racegoers, but the demonstration after today's victory was the greatest extended for several seasons.

Although showery weather prevailed,
there was a large attendance. Arasee was withdrawn, leaving only four to face the barrier in the handicap.
Blackford was the favorite, with Boggs next in command. Silver Knight and Blackford set the pace, but Boggs assumed command a sixteenth from home, winning by a neck from the fast-coming Edwin T. Fryer. Silver Knight was third. The four horses finished heads and necks apart.

The other events were interesting.

BOXING CONTEST
NEW YEAR'S NIGHTBilly Griffith Meets Jack Foy at Monroe
A. O.

The first boxing contest of the new year will take place on New Year's night at the Monroe Athletic Club in the Steiner-Emery building on Viaduct place, and it promises to be the best scrap that has ever been pulled off in Atlanta.

What the preliminary bout will be is not definitely known, but Greek Eddie Kelly and Bobby Van, the two youngsters who made such a hit with their six-round bout last Thursday night, will probably be the ones to go on.

The main bout is a corker. Jack Foy, the rejuvenated Foy, the new Foy, the Foy that is taking good care of himself and keeping in fine condition, is one of the principals and Foy has improved so much in his work that he is going to be a hard customer for any man of his weight to handle.

Billy Griffith, of Dayton, Ohio, is the boy that will meet Foy. Griffith has been in three matches in Atlanta and showed in them that he was the best man at his weight that has ever been seen in Atlanta. The local fans have been anxious ever since to see him in action once more.

Con Riley, who formerly managed Kid McCoy, is managing Billy Griffith, and Riley is certainly some judge of a fighter and it is a cinch that he would not have any one on his string that could not get the job done.

Griffith beat Gordon and Foy here and got the decision over Bowman in ten rounds. Foy is anxious to get another crack at Griffith and believes that he will be able to do better this time. Billy Griffith believes so too and they are going to be out in force.

With the comfortably heated hall that the club has and the good bout the hall is sure to be crowded to the doors for this engagement.

VANDERBILT'S STAR BASKETBALL TEAM

This is the bunch that meets the Atlanta Athletic Club at the club's gymnasium on Tuesday night. Last year the clubmen lost by the score of 33 to 26, and they are after revenge. Reading from left to right: Top row, Pontecost, sub guard; Nelson, sub forward; Gilmore, manager; Freeland, sub guard; Weakley, sub forward. Bottom row, Sorrell, guard; Brown, guard; Martin, forward; McGehee, captain and center. Neely, the other forward, is not in the picture.

WILL BIG WORLD'S SERIES
BE DROPPED NEXT YEAR?Lengthening of National League Schedule Makes Step Probable—American May Follow Suit—Some Loose Football Gossip.

By J. W. Helman.

Considerable surprise has been caused by the announcement that the National League had extended its season so as to cover 168 games. Instead of 154 as heretofore. Many are wondering whether this means that there will be no more special championship games between the winners in the National and in the American leagues.

Right off the bat it does not look like a bit that way, and who can tell the time to go into the baseball business a little heavier than ever. This conclusion they would naturally come to if they believed that the public was not so tired out by a season of games prolonged to this extent, and, secondly, they must have believed that the financial panic, was or would be by next summer.

Baseball, from either the sporting or the business point of view, never had a brighter outlook than it has right now. Things picked up wonderfully last year, and there promises to be no diminution of interest. If, then, people are all working again and have the money to attend ball games, and want to attend them, there is no reason why the season should not be extended in the season of the weather. We have the wrestling and boxing game with us the whole year around, and with game or sport—weather and pocketbooks permitting.

Any World's Series.
But will there be a championship series? Hard to say, but for my part,
I look to see the American League extend its season also from 154 games to 168. The American cannot afford to be left behind in a seeming forward movement of this character.
The championship series business drop now with the honors for the past three years all stored and hoarded up in the trophy room of the rival organization.
Hence you can bank on it that the American is going to call for that championship series just the same as ever.

The American may see its way out of the difficulty without extending its season, however. Of course, the pennant winner could not afford to be idle, merely waiting for the race in the rival league to wind up, for rest means rust in the world of baseball, as well as elsewhere. But the American pennant winner could play postseason exhibition games with any number of the other teams in its own league, to keep in shape, just as is now done between many of the teams as a sort of consolation series, and such games might perhaps be better

GOSSIP OF THE RACE TRACKS

By James Dockersall.

New York, December 25.—(Publisher's Press Special.)—After a long term of innocuous desuetude the race track at Saratoga Springs is going to boom again next season. This is the best news I have heard in a long time, for when things are done at Saratoga they are done on a grand scale with plenty of fireworks and display. According to the proposed schedule nearly $200, 000 will be given away during the prospective 20-day meeting at Saratoga Springs in 1910 in the way of stakes and purses. This amount of money has not been given away from the fund subscribed last year by breeders and horsemen. Stakes and purses amounting to $60,000 have just been hung up and the entries, so far as are posted, show that some of the best talent of America will be on hand. There will be more than 100 overnight purses of $500 each. Already $42,000 in stakes has been closed.

This looks as though racing were going up. This year the meet at the Springs was somewhat of a fizzle, just as it was last year, on account of the silly betting law. There is a good time coming and, while we may never regain the old-time prestige fully, we are moving towards it slowly and surely.

Latonia Track Goes Up.
Well, I guess it is now up to the Latonia race track to go out of business. Latonia used to be a great place, but in recent years it has met with one reverse after another. The latest was a decision from the court of appeals of the state of Kentucky finding bookmaking illegal and prohibiting it.
In Kentucky, Atlanta, or New Orleans, that all kinds of betting on horse races is prohibited. The state racing commissioners did not like the plan of bookmaking at Latonia so they brought suit to compel the state to prohibit machines may be used and they are many who declare that these are about on a par with no betting at all. The state racing commission was created by the Kentucky legislature, so it is the supreme mak-a-muk down Kentucky way pari-mutual betting has already proved a failure at Latonia. The next best thing is no betting at all. I expect soon to hear that the historic old track across the Ohio from Cincinnati is being out in building lots.

Some pretty racing cards were given today at Juarez and Jacksonville.
Many took occasion of the Christmas holiday to go to the track who could not get away otherwise. My correspondents at both places wired me that the crowds were record-breakers and everyone seemed to have plenty of money. The tracks were generally fast with good weather.

The entries for the $5,000 Brooklyn
Derby for 2-year-olds, 1 mile and a half, to be run at Gravesend in 1911, include the cream of the American breeding farms, as represented by Angust Belmont, James R. Keene, H. P.
Whitney, James E. Madden, R. T. Wilson, Jr.

Fast Two-Year-Olds.
Some of the 2-year-olds who are going to vie for the honors on the eastern tracks in 1910 are the following: Rogon, Footprint, Waterville, Flint Rock, Hectagon, owned by August Belmont; Matchminer, Bardminster, Instepstone, owned by E. C. Cascott; Meridian, (Ray colt by Bromstick), Aviator (brown colt by Bromstick), owned by T. L.
Harrison; Country Gentleman, owned by A. B. Spracklen. These are youngsters of 2-year-olds who have never yet run. Watch for them on our card next season.

XMAS HANDICAP
TO WOOLWINDEREyebright Finishes First, but Is Disqualified.Tactics of Jockey Powers in the Stretch Responsible for Disqualification—Five Heavily Played Favorites Won, and People Went Home Happy.

Jacksonville, Fla., December 25.—The attendance record at Moncrief Park was broken this afternoon, the largest crowd that ever attended a race meeting in Florida being present when the barrer shot up on the first event. And the handsome gathering was rewarded by a brilliant card, the finishes being the prettiest that have been seen at Moncrief during the present meeting.
No less than five of the six races were won by favorites and they were all heavily played, which sent the big crowd home in the best spirits.

Powers had a great day in the saddle, winning no less than three races.
He finished first in the Christmas handicap on Eyebright at 6 to 8, but in the stretch run he was guilty of unsports-manlike tactics, grabbing the bridle of Woolwinder, and also hitting Wool-winder's jockey with his whip. This action on the part of the star rider did not escape the eyes of the officials, and after the race Powers' mount was disqualified and Woolwinder was given the first money. Jockey Powers was fined $200 and suspended for one week.

NEGRO, SHOT

NEW SLEEP WALLOP UNCORKED NAMED THE "MASTOID PUNCH"

Sporting Editor of The Constitution Names New Knock-out Blow and Uncovers Jack Johnson's Penetrable Spot for Jeffries to Hit.

By Dick Jenson.

A new blow in the fist realm, a new knockout blow, or rather, the name for same, has been uncorked, and around this blow revolves a story in which the fight fans of Atlanta will be interested, in view of the coming Jeffries-Johnson melee.

The blow is the "Mastoid Punch," and as a sleep-producer, it has got the solar plexus and other blows landed in the past backed off the boards. This new blow is very seldom landed, but when it does strike home, nothing but the counting of the fatal "10" by the referee breaks the silence that surrounds the ringside.

Bob Fitzsimmons used this celebrated punch when he knocked out Jack Dempsey, in New Orleans, in 1901, in the fourth round, but, at that time, the punch did not have any name, and it was but by accident that the Cornishman landed it. This scrap is the only one of importance, with one exception, where this blow has been used and to telling effect.

The exception is the Johnson-Ketchel fight at Colma, Cal., recently. And around this latter fight revolves the tale above mentioned. But before relating the tale, a description of the new blow is in order.

Named "Mastoid Punch."

The name "Mastoid Punch" is given by the writer. He claims the credit for naming the new punch, but, in scientific language, the correct title is "a blow on the mastoid process." The mastoid process is located back of the ear. The spunky portion of the bone directly behind either ear on the side of the head contains some air cells. A blow struck against these cells will cause them to inflame and swell, and produce unconsciousness, just the same as a solar plexus and a blow to the chin will do. You have, no doubt, heard, dear reader, of a person having "mastoiditis." Well, this is caused by a blow being struck in the place above mentioned.

But to get back to the story. The secret is out. Jack Johnson's weak spot has been found, the wallop that will put him in Sleepville has been discovered, and the celebrated moving pictures are the cause of it.

Imagine, if you were a prize fighter, and insisted on sharing in the proceeds of the moving pictures, to have the blooming things give away your points to some other fellow who has a good chance to lick you. Wouldn't you be sorry? Well, more than that, I guess. You would feel more like smashing the blooming moving pictures.

It came about as the result of the moving pictures of Johnson's bout with Stanley Ketchel. When the mid-dleweight champion floored the dingy in the twelfth and final round, the cry went out that Johnson was faking, in order to enhance the value of the moving pictures. But this is not true.

Ketchel Handed the "Mastoid." Ketchel discovered the great weakness in Johnson's make-up. The white man hit the colored man directly behind the ear, and Jack went down in a heap. He was hurt badly. The moving pictures show this by the pained expression on the negro's face. It was only his remarkable strength that enabled him to climb to his feet and finish Ketchel.

The blow that Ketchel landed was the one that I have named the "Mastoid Punch." As said before, occasions are very rare where a fighter lands this blow with telling effect, but when it does land, it is "sing me to sleep, mother dear."

Ketchel, by this blow, uncovered Johnson's weakness. If Jeffries, with his remarkable strength, hits Jack there it will be only necessary to count the fatal "10."

Johnson has a malformed head. This is evident, and the discovery of this weakness by Ketchel may prove his undoing by Jeffries. Truly, it does enhance the big brawler's chance very perceptibly.

In other words, Johnson has known this weakness, naturally, longer than any one else, and he has not the "val-low streak" that has been accorded him. He most naturally wishes to protect this weak point of his, and can hardly blame him, especially in view of the immense amount of money that is at stake, in addition to the honor of being the undisputed champion of the world.

SPORTSDOM LOSES FAMOUS MEMBER

Passing of Pat Sheedy Calls Forth Several Reminiscences.

By Manhattan.

New York, December 25.—(Publishers' Press Special.)—The year which will end in another week has removed from the ranks of sportdom some of its best-known members. The last to pass away was Pat Sheedy, the man who made the word "square" famous, who made half a million in touring John L. Sullivan, and who won and lost a score of fortunes at faro. At Smith, next to Sheedy, was perhaps the best-known sporting man who also answered the last great roll call this year. Then there was Paddy Moore, father-in-law of Charley Mitchell, the prize fighter. Although Paddy Moore's fame was bounded only by the confines of our little planet. Judge McDowell, a turfman known to every track from Sheepshead Bay to Oakland, also replied to the ultimate bugle. Among the lesser lights there was Billy Hogg, the baseball pitcher, who died only a few weeks ago in New Orleans. Billy nearly won the pennant for the Hill Top team against the White Sox once upon a time.

I dropped into the Albany bar last night and greeted, by chance, one of the old cronies of Pat Sheedy. I learned many interesting things, some of which I will hereby relate:

Sheedy was one of two survivors of the old Chicago gang of sports who put the Windy City on the map a score of years ago. The other is Harry Davies, who is now running a theater in New Orleans. The old bunch consisted of "Jer" Dunn, Al Smith, George Hankins, Jimmie Elliott and Mike McDonald. For years these men were the stars in all the sporting events at Salt Lake City. All of them graduated from the same school—the faro bank.

Sheedy's star game was faro. He was playing in a club in Hot Springs, Ark., some years ago, and in a short time had dropped $24,000. Turning to Charley De Milt, who was running the game, Pat said:

"Say, Charley, I'm busted, but I've got a picture painted by a bill named Rubens that's good for a bunch, and my share is $35,000. Can I play it in?"

"Sure," replied De Milt.

Pat lost $5,000 more, and soon afterwards the famous painting was sold in Detroit. The first thing Sheedy did after getting his share was to pay De Milt.

Sheedy never followed the races. He talked it a sucker's game.

throughout the country with but a few slight exceptions.

The evils lie, as President Taft has so wisely said, "in the system;" and what is needed is the appointment of a commission by congress, and by states, of the very ablest legal talent in the country, without regard or any other consideration, who will conscientiously undertake a thoroughgoing reform and accomplish the ends in view—abolition of the delays, and cutting down of the enormous expense incident to these trials, and the striking out from the constitutions and from the statutes of the states all those provisions which obstruct these great ends.

It is not meant by me to suggest that any of those great safeguards of personal liberty, inherent in the nature of every fair trial should be interfered with, but I do think that all those constitutional provisions and all legislative provisions which result necessarily in making possible the long delays in the administration of the civil and criminal laws, which can fairly be classified as merely technical in their character, not going to the substance of a fair trial, should be eliminated. We live in a different atmosphere from that which prevailed at Runnymede, and the laws of our age should conform to the needs of our age.

By Charles N. Potter.
(Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Wyoming.)

I am aware that there is a widespread belief that in the country-at-large there are radical defects in the present legal system resulting in undue delays of the law, which are, in turn, responsible for a failure in many cases in the enforcement of the criminal law, allow an unreasonable and unfair advantage in civil cases in favor of the contestant who may be in a better position to sustain a prolonged litigation, or permit one party by mere delay practically to prevent the other from securing his just right, and I do not doubt that there is reasonable ground for just criticism along these lines.

I am not prepared to formulate a plan in detail for such reforms, but would say generally that it should tend to a simplification of the system. This might involve in time, possibly, a radical change in the organization of the courts, with a view to the disposition of causes, decreasing the expense of litigation, and removing unnecessary obstacles to the prompt and easy transmission of a cause for review in an appellate tribunal.

A step in the direction of expediting and lessening the cost of appeals has already been taken in Wyoming by providing for sending up the original papers, although it is still necessary to present a bill of exceptions, which, however, when settled and filed may itself be transmitted as an original paper.

Unreasonable continuances of trials, either by consent or upon the application of a party, as well as unreasonable changes of venue or judge for the trial of particular causes should be guarded against by stringent regulations, insuring so far as possible that only proper motives and plain necessity shall secure such continuance or change.

In simplifying the practice, the method of selecting juries and submitting causes to them will, I think, demand attention with the view of securing an intelligent and impartial jury and giving them the reasonable assistance of the court free from some of the technical rules seeming to prevail in many of the states in the matter of instructions. In this connection I believe that the examination of jurors for the purpose of testing their qualifications and freedom from improper bias or prejudice can be more reasonably regulated and curtailed than under the existing practice.

There might, I think, without in-

CHRISTMAS is not over, it's not too late to give that automobile for a present. We are showing Limousine, Touring Cars and Tonneauette for immediate delivery. Now is the time for closed cars and we have the most comfortable, beautifully finished, elegantly appointed, powerful Limousine shown in Atlanta, seats three or five people inside, all face forward, chair seats fold out of the way when not in use; an ideal car for shopping and social affairs; a car that the wife will be delighted with, and the kind of a car she needs for this weather.

Our Model "R" Family Touring Car is of the same high-grade quality, nothing but the best goes into the manufacture of Knox Cars. We wish to emphasize manufactured. Knox Cars are built by the Knox Automobile Co., not assembled. You have a high-class, responsible concern behind every Knox. This means all vital parts, such as Motor, Transmission, Body Type, etc., are developments of a well organized Engineering Department of an exclusive automobile manufacturer, where each individual part has that careful inspection so necessary to produce the perfect motor car. This is impossible where these parts are manufactured by the jobber who has no interest in the finished product. The assembled car does not show the same refinement in detail so much in evidence in a Knox, and so highly appreciated by the Discriminating Buyer.

We have not the space to give a detailed description of the mechanical features, so will be brief. Our Model "R" Limousine, Touring and Tonneauette Cars have the Famous Knox Unit Power plant, three point suspension, valves in the Head Motor, Sliding gear, selective type transmission, three forward speeds, one reverse and shaft drive. This combined with High-grade Material and Workmanship make Knox Cars the most efficient, powerful and reliable on the market. This is a strong claim and we are prepared to prove it.

Knox Cars are sold completely equipped, no extras to buy. We equip each car with the following: Top Complete, Glass Front, Prestolite Tank, Shock Absorbers, Spedometer, Clock, Tire Holders, Tire Cover, Baggage Rack, Five Lamps, Horn and complete set of tools; also furnish Demountable Rims without extra cost. Can't think of anything more you would want, can you?

We want to see you and explain in detail the many exclusive features embodied in the manufacture of Knox Cars.

only properly applicable to the other kind of institution. Heretofore students of the college which didn't teach those things that count up fast under the Carnegie system could not possibly get into good standing. They were discriminated against. Henceforth it will make no difference what school or kind of school they attend, no difference how many units they have or haven't got, the only question will be whether they are fully initiated freshmen of their respective colleges. Of course, no "subs" will be able to participate. This is just as well, for, at that period, they are liable to be too young for the game, or if old enough in years, it would mean that the particular individual must be backward and behind in his scholastic work, and, therefore, he will really need all the time of his first year to get straightened out in his college course.

Committee Named.

Another mighty good move was the appointment of the original committee to go over the national rules after they are formulated for 1910, and determine whether they are adequate to bring about the general change in the game that all desire, with a view to lessening its dangers. While, as conducted in the south, football does not appear to be particularly dangerous in this section, yet it is wise for the southern intercollegiate athletic association to do all it can to help modify it in all ways that promise a diminution of dangerous elements.

A committee will confer with coaches of the southern states and it might be stated that the gentlemen on the committee are themselves well versed to hold views of their own, the effect of any particular rule, and the effect of any particular rule on the athletic association people have and they do not propose to see a game as football blotted because of any pig-headedness of the national committee.

It should be developed that the no real intention of reducing the game. In a word, we are that football, in some of the southern states, in years to come, no matter what a game they do or do not play in the north, should be held all future association in one or two large cities of the south, as it is the press reports of the committee to the delegates to the delegates.

RICH AND POOR MUST BE EQUAL

different today, both in England and the United States.

The danger today is not that any innocent man will be convicted, but that guilty men will constantly escape, by reason of redemptions of technical delays of the law, which are, in turn, responsible for a failure in many cases in the enforcement of the criminal law, allow an unreasonable and unfair advantage in civil cases in favor of the contestant who may be in a better position to sustain a prolonged litigation, or permit one party by mere delay practically to prevent the other from securing his just right, and I do not doubt that there is reasonable ground for just criticism along these lines.

By Charles N. Potter.

I am aware that there is a widespread belief that in the country-at-large there are radical defects in the present legal system resulting in undue delays of the law, which are, in turn, responsible for a failure in many cases in the enforcement of the criminal law, allow an unreasonable and unfair advantage in civil cases in favor of the contestant who may be in a better position to sustain a prolonged litigation, or permit one party by mere delay practically to prevent the other from securing his just right, and I do not doubt that there is reasonable ground for just criticism along these lines.

I am not prepared to formulate a plan in detail for such reforms, but would say generally that it should tend to a simplification of the system. This might involve in time, possibly, a radical change in the organization of the courts, with a view to the disposition of causes, decreasing the expense of litigation, and removing unnecessary obstacles to the prompt and easy transmission of a cause for review in an appellate tribunal.

A step in the direction of expediting and lessening the cost of appeals has already been taken in Wyoming by providing for sending up the original papers, although it is still necessary to present a bill of exceptions, which, however, when settled and filed may itself be transmitted as an original paper.

Unreasonable continuances of trials, either by consent or upon the application of a party, as well as unreasonable changes of venue or judge for the trial of particular causes should be guarded against by stringent regulations, insuring so far as possible that only proper motives and plain necessity shall secure such continuance or change.

In simplifying the practice, the method of selecting juries and submitting causes to them will, I think, demand attention with the view of securing an intelligent and impartial jury and giving them the reasonable assistance of the court free from some of the technical rules seeming to prevail in many of the states in the matter of instructions. In this connection I believe that the examination of jurors for the purpose of testing their qualifications and freedom from improper bias or prejudice can be more reasonably regulated and curtailed than under the existing practice.

There might, I think, without injustice be fewer exemptions and excuses from jury duty, and in view of modern conditions, it may be necessary and not unreasonable to place further limitations upon the right of challenge.

I would also suggest that in criminal cases every objection to the complaint or indictment, except such as denies the jurisdiction of the court or the criminal character of the acts in substance charged, should be deemed to have been waived unless made before the trial. I do not favor the plan proposed by some, of abolishing appeals in criminal cases, although I think that such appeals might be placed under great restrictions and limitations that are now ordinarily provided for. While, in my opinion, the policy of allowing a conviction in criminal prosecutions by less than a unanimous verdict is worthy of serious consideration, and there are some good reasons under present conditions appearing to render that desirable if not necessary, I do not feel prepared to assent to it until qualified, especially in cases of felony.

Reforms in this matter must necessarily be slow, and in some respects may require constitutional amendment. In many localities it may be wise substantially to increase the number of judges, as well as to provide for longer tenure of office, with a salary more reasonable than is usually the case, commensurate with the responsibility exercised, and the ability and experience required.

When comparing the administration of the law in this country with the results in European countries, it may not be out of place to continue the comparisons to the laws relating to the selection, terms of office and compensation of judicial officers.

Not that it is to be supposed that the usually short terms of office and small salaries prevailing here have had a part in producing the evils now complained of, or have deterred the judges from industriously and conscientiously discharging their duties. For I take it generally to be conceded, so far as this country is concerned, that a rule the law has been administered at least honestly and free from improper motives or influences, and that all the time reasonably possible for the purpose has been devoted to the hearing and disposition of the business coming before the courts.

I am optimistic enough to believe that in the end the good sense of the people, their respect for the law and their sense of responsibility, will result in a more prompt judicial procedure, as well as prompt judicial procedure, will result in the general adoption of such measures as will promote the administration of justice without unnecessary delay, and at the same time secure to the individual a just and proper protection of his rights.

By William T. Thompson.
(Attorney General of Nebraska.)

I am not prepared to speak of other than the conditions obtaining in this state in federal courts.

So far as the federal courts of this state are concerned, I think it is only fair to say there are very few delays in the prosecution of causes, both civil and criminal.

We have two judges of the district court who, in the absence of the circuit judges, perform the functions of the circuit judges, and all cases, civil and criminal, so far as my observation has gone, have been disposed of with reasonable dispatch.

I have heard no complaints of law's delays in the federal court.

I think the rich and poor are served alike and justice is meted out as well as it may be considering the fallibility that is common to judges as well as to the rest of mankind.

By William A. Anderson.
(Attorney General of Virginia.)

I can speak only for Virginia. In this state the procedure in both civil and criminal cases has been very much simplified and as a rule the trial and decision of causes, both civil and criminal, are not unduly delayed. The costs of both civil and criminal proceedings are taking everything into account, exceedingly moderate.

Making the comparison with the federal courts, I would say that the costs in the state courts in civil cases do not amount to more than one-fourth as much as they do in like cases in the federal courts.

I do not claim that either our civil or criminal courts in Virginia are by any means perfect. Both are being gradually improved and perfected. I am sure, however, that there is in this state no such just cause for complaint of the law's delay or of the cost of obtaining the decision of cases, as there would seem from President Taft's statements to exist in other jurisdictions.

By F. H. Norcross.
(Chief Justice of Nevada Supreme Court.)

The suggestion of President Taft for the appointment of a commission by congress whose duty it shall be to prepare and submit a system of civil and criminal procedure for the federal courts, is undoubtedly the best and quickest way to remedy existing defects.

Such system ought to be a model for the several states and be the means of eventually establishing a uniform procedure throughout the country.

If congress will provide for and allow President Taft to name the commission, it will have enacted a piece of legislation of immeasurable value to the American people.

We need reform in our prison and jail systems and in our methods of dealing with offenders against the laws both before and after conviction, as well as reform in our procedure.

Next year the national census will be taken. Congress should provide that it has not already done so, for the ascertainment of the causes that are mainly responsible for such widespread crime in the United States. When we know something more of the causes that are mainly responsible for crime, we may, and I believe will, find that some very simple remedies will accomplish some very wonderful results.

By W. E. Mullins.
(Attorney General of Wyoming.)

The law delay, discussed by the president, while not a subject of serious complaint in our state, seems to be a source of widespread dissatisfaction throughout the country. Possible remedies which occur to me are:

An increased number of judges to dispose of crowded dockets; a nearer approach to the standards of European countries in methods of selection, terms and salaries of judges and prosecutors; and a more simplified system for the settlement of charges of crimes, with enlarged authority and facilities for prosecutors in the investigation of crime; abolition of the rule requiring unanimous verdicts; greater restrictions upon the right of appeal in civil and criminal cases; some plan for the elimination of the influence of local sympathy, prejudice and threadbare technicalities from criminal trials.

Since justice, or injustice, must flow from litigation and litigation itself is an acknowledged fact of life, it must be governed by the ordinary rule of contest which permit the use of power and resources.

The Thaw case and the Calhoun case are conspicuous examples, while opportunity for the rich and poor, or for strong and weak, cannot be accomplished.

By D. E. Morgan.
(Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of North Dakota.)

I deem President Taft's suggestion as to the appointment of a commission an excellent one. So far as the practice in appellate courts is concerned I would deem it a step in advance to avoid delays if the right of appeal be limited to merely money demand matters. Where no principle is involved it is a financial loss to the appellate even to win on an appeal involving a small amount. I would also suggest that the right of appeal be limited where no question is involved except a question of fact. On this the verdict of the jury, confirmed by the opinion of the trial court, should be final in ordinary cases.

It would also result in speedier decisions if the writing of opinions in trivial cases and in appeals where no new question is involved could be dispensed with. In trial courts too much time is taken up in empanelling juries and in useless cross-examinations.

If a commission can suggest a remedy for those abuses some of the bad conditions mentioned by President Taft would be improved.

By C. B. Grant.
(Chief Justice of Supreme Court of Michigan.)

There is occasionally good ground for complaint against appellate courts for delay in deciding cases. I can say of the supreme court of Michigan that there has seldom been unjustifiable delays. The trouble is mainly with the trial courts and with the judges of those courts.

Those judges can promptly dispose of business if they will unless there is a too crowded condition of the dockets. Too much time is wasted in the trial of cases.

Many trial judges permit arguments upon admissibility of testimony. Some drastic law or constitutional provision may be adopted which would enforce speedy determination of cases, but I see no way to remedy delays caused by the slowness of trial judges, except by refusing to elect or appoint them.

AN INTERVIEW WITH DR. W. M. BAIRD ON MEDICAL ADVERTISING AND VARIOUS HEALTH SUBJECTS

An advertising representative of The Constitution recently called on Dr. W. M. Baird, and had a talk with him with reference to the line of talks he has been making in the Sunday papers on health subjects, and found him ready to talk interestingly of these subjects, as well as the matter of advertising a medical business in general.

The doctor was emphatic in his declaration that all advertising should be absolutely truthful and without any equivocations whatever. He did not hesitate to say that very much of medical advertising, especially, has been deceptive in its character, and, in consequence, had brought advertising specialists more or less into disrepute.

Some of these concerns come into a place and advertise as having a large staff of physicians, all of which is false, and the people, after a time, find they have been simply humbugged, to use the plain term.

He went on to say that he had perfect faith in advertising, and believed in his right, as a physician, to advertise, and believed in the propriety of his doing it without any hypocrisy whatever, doing it openly and above board, rather than by sub rosa methods.

The doctor went on to say: "Very few doctors who succeed but do it by some kind of advertising. One man joins a number of societies to bring him a large acquaintance; another attaches himself to some powerful church organization, and another gets an appointment political or otherwise, all with the hope of its being the means of giving him publicity and bringing him before the public."

These are perhaps creditable, but there are other means that are sometimes used by physicians that are not quite so creditable. Here is one, for instance, of writing reports given and always squeezing into it some particular treatment or medicine that is really a proprietary medicine, but kept in the hands of the profession. The consequence is the larger manufacture of this preparation will boom the doctor, or at least reprint his writings and circulate it, not at all infrequently broadcast. More than once I have been offered flattering considerations to lend myself to this kind of work, but I look upon it as being decidedly dishonest, and have never yet been guilty of it. I have been steadily in the work for a third of a century, and have given conscientious attention to my profession, and believe there are some things I have learned that are of value in the line of my work, and I am not afraid to state it in public print, and then if anyone has any reason to criticize it, they are at perfect liberty to do so.

Another thing in advertising I firmly believe in getting right down to hard facts, and calling a spade a spade right from the first instance, and not go beating around the bush for a half-column and try to say something that, in the end, means nothing but fear of trading on someone's susceptibility.

For instance, I know and every doctor that has any sense knows, and a large mass of the laity know that gonorrhea is one of the most vital subjects today before the profession.

At any rate, there are thousands of men who are sufferers from the effect of the disease that realize the truth of what I am saying, and long before the discovery of the germ of the disease, eminent physicians had taught that many of the ailments in women, innocent women, mind you, was due to the germs of the disease, and we know today that hundreds of men are suffering from the sequels of the disease, who little suspect that it is due to a chronic gonorrhea in their younger days.

Many men believe that the bad effects that follow the disease running into chronic condition, the infection of the prostate gland, seminal vesicles, and even the bladder, and the inoculation of the system, so as to produce gonorrheal rheumatism, etc., is due to bad treatment they have had, and these conditions often follow under the best treatment that can possibly be given.

Sometimes perhaps patients are encouraged by this belief by going to some physician who may tell them they have had bad treatment before, simply to throw discredit on the doctor who has been treating them. This may not be creditable, but it is true, nevertheless.

From my point of view, many of these cases, when they become chronic, the prostate urethra, prostate gland, and seminal vesicles become involved, and unnecessary too much harsh and unceasing treatment. I have had many cases, as anyone knows who reads my articles, very decided opinions on this subject. They have been driven into me and nallied fast there by a hard experience. I'll admit that I condemn the use of the ordinary purple solution of permanganate of potash, and I have good reason to condemn it. I am, in all probability, the first man to ever receive a cure of gonorrhea, long before Janet had popularized it in France, and so far as I know, I am the first to ever devise a deep urethral irrigation instrument, too, which I used for some years with great success, but later on discarded for better methods.

Then I know, too, that nitrate of silver has been used for many decades for applications in the deep urethra, and it is very rare that it does any good to anyone, or even that it does any harm. It is never compensated for the great amount of pain that follows its use and for the fact that it will produce an inflammation of the prostate gland, seminal vesicles, or even of the bladder and other organs connected with the parts. If I am opposed to this old rou-gnorant of the true conditions, or else many others are.

"According to Mr. Hester's report of last season, the southern mills actually consumed 2,560,000 bales, regardless of the fact that 215 mills out of a total of 184, were, on account of the panic, one to two months late in starting, and their present capacity is about 1,500,000 bales. The total consumption for all of the United States mills, last year, was 5,000,000; but the consumption of all foreign mills of American cotton was 3,000,000, or a grand total of 13,157,000 bales.

On the 1st of September, the estimated millage carried over in the United States were 480,000. The average monthly consumption, last year, in the United States was 416,666, and as the mills-at-large through the north and many sections of the south, foreign and continental mills, it was not before October, before new supplies actually reach the mills in any quantity, the apparent carry-over was actually nothing, which was the reason spot cotton became so short last summer at the tail end of the season and scored such heavy advances in the face of the largest crop on record. The average monthly consumption last year for foreign mills was 67,450, and the apparent carry-over by these mills on the 1st of September was 1,100,000, or about a six weeks' supply.

Carry-Over Cotton Exhausted.

"Now, as a matter of fact, before any quantity of cotton can reach the foreign and continental mills, it was not before October, before new supplies actually reach the mills in any quantity, the apparent carry-over was actually nothing, which was the reason spot cotton became so short last summer at the tail end of the season and scored such heavy advances in the face of the largest crop on record. The average monthly consumption last year for foreign mills was 67,450, and the apparent carry-over by these mills on the 1st of September was 1,100,000, or about a six weeks' supply.

Advance Not Felt by Consumer.

The main point that strikes the writer is a heavy advance can occur in cotton, and a heavy advance in the price of the raw material, and the advance is not felt, whatever, by the consumer. The cost of manufacturing flour from wheat is from one cent to one and a half cents per bushel on corn or wheat would be felt by the consumer. The cost of manufacturing a pair of trousers from cotton is from one cent to one and a half cents per pound on cotton. The cost of manufacturing a pair of trousers from cotton is from one cent to one and a half cents per pound on cotton. The cost of manufacturing a pair of trousers from cotton is from one cent to one and a half cents per pound on cotton.

the business was greatly depressed, on account of the panic of the year previous, and a large amount of labor was unemployed, which condition does not extend today, and as the entire world, so to speak, is on the crest of prosperity, the masses-at-large could well afford at present to pay higher prices than last year with less inconvenience. On account of the higher price of grain in the west and all manufacturers doing a successful business in the east at present, the buying power of the United States is such that an advance of a small per cent on manufactured goods will have no effect upon the consumption, and, personally, I believe the mills of this country will consume, this year, at least 5,000,000 bales, regardless of prices; but for the sake of argument, let us say the United States mills, this year, consume only 4,500,000.

According to Hester's report, December 10, the mills of the United States have taken 1,727,000 and, therefore, have yet to secure 2,773,000, an extremely short supply. We have exported 2,295,000, and, therefore, there only remain available for the balance of the world 2,827,000, making a total available supply for the world, this year, 5,122,000, against their takings last year of 5,856,000. It must be remembered that this small supply is not only for the mills until the 1st of September, but the foreign mills from about the middle of October to the 1st of November, and the United States mills from the middle of September to the first of October before new supplies will be available, so it is absolutely necessary on the first of September, every season, for the mills to show a reasonable carry-over.

Bales Are Short.

"These figures are based, of course, upon the government's estimate of the crop, which agrees with the writer's views; yet if the government were 400,000 bales in error, these figures would not be changed, because before this year passes the average weight of the bales will be fully two per cent short of last year, while the spinning quality of the cotton is easily two per cent inferior to what it was last year, making a total of four per cent, or 400,000 bales, to be deducted from the government's present estimate, to be equal to the same number of bales of last season's crop. "While the Liverpool market at present is not much higher than the American market, if the American

tine treatment, it is because I learned by experience that if I stuck to it I did not cure my patients, and if a doctor isn't educated for the purpose of curing his patients, I would like to know what under the sun he is educated for. At any rate, that's what the patient demands and that's what the doctor should try to give him. Then, too, there is Syphilis. No disease is so amenable to treatment and can be so thoroughly and effectively cured as this, providing the patient is thoroughly instructed and given a perfect knowledge as to what the disease is, the time it takes for a cure and what is necessary to cure.

Naturally, when a patient gets this dreadful disease he wants to get a cure quick. I presume I'd be the same way if I got the disease. We'll would be, but not only the opinion of men who in this age are handling; the disease day after day, but the cumulative opinion of all men that have gone before us whose opinion is worth anything, is that the disease can not be cured and perfectly and permanently cured in a short space of time.

Now, what is the consequence? Why, a lot of men are drifting around the country uncured simply because the doctor gave them some treatment which eradicated the apparent symptoms of the disease and left them in the end apparently cured, only to have the disease recur again and again, and in a few years leave them in a deplorable condition indeed.

I saw just such a case only a few moments ago. A very intelligent gentleman, indeed, contracted the disease a few months ago and quite probably was put under a very good treatment. I have no reason to question the treatment at all. At any rate, he got better and seemed to be perfectly cured, and was encouraged by someone to believe he had a cure. Later on it breaks out in a much more virulent form, and, worst of all, he has probably inoculated his wife, an innocent woman, and you can just imagine the many complications that will arise in connection with such a case. That is what I mean when I talk about a cure.

A patient gets the disease and goes to some doctor who feels he can shove some radical treatment in him that will relieve the symptoms in a few weeks, perhaps a month or two months, and they have knowledge enough of the disease to know that by pushing certain remedies into the patient quite freely that the eruptions and symptoms of the disease will disappear in a few weeks and then they assure the patient that he is alright and he will never have any return of the disease.

The patient pays his money, only to realize in a few months how he has been faked out of his hard earned coin, and to realize how much better it would have been to have trusted someone who would have been honest and conscientious with him in the beginning and told him truthfully what the disease was, what it meant, and what he had to go through before he got a thorough and permanent cure.

Of course, many patients, if you are truthful with them and tell them this, they will still think there ought to be some means of curing them quick and you will lose your patients, and, for me, from my point of view, I would rather do this than to deceive a man in so serious a matter.

At any rate, being located here permanently, I know what I am talking about, for I get a large proportion of my work from just such cases. Case after case comes in to me that has been treated for gonorrhea, for instance, and promised a cure in five or ten days, given some strong medicines to check the disease temporarily, but in a month or two they come to me with trouble down in the prostatic urethra and seminal vesicles, fully realizing how badly they have been duped.

Other men get Syphilis, go to Hot Springs or some doctor, who promises a cure in a few weeks for a good round sum of money, and after an experience of a year or so of this kind they realize how much better it is to have a conscientious opinion, even though the opinion does not altogether meet with their wishes in the matter.

I had a gratifying circumstance of this kind only recently. A gentleman came to me some four years ago. I think it is, who had had just about the experience that I mention above. I fully explained it to him, assured him candidly of what could and could not be done and he was good enough to give me his complete confidence and I treated him to a standstill and a cure.

Following the methods I have always encouraged with such patients, of having them call on me whenever they can, years afterwards, and let me look them over and see if I can see any effects of the disease, all of which I never make a charge for, this gentleman has recently called on me and after expressing himself as highly pleased with my handling of the case, and my kindness to him in the past, made me a handsome present as an indication of his good will and esteem for what I have done for him.

Then, too, there are a great number of cases drifting from one doctor to another looking for relief, very often having their symptoms pooh-poohed by their physician, yet they know that they are real sufferers, and that their symptoms are not imaginary. Very often these patients get to be looked upon as hypochondriacs and perhaps they are, but their condition is none the less real and none the less worthy of attention by the conscientious physician.

From my point of view, I think that the attention of a consulting physician, and when a man comes in suffering from nervous depression or from a lowering of the tone of certain vital functions it is certainly not the province of a conscientious physician to pooh-pooh his condition and to turn him off with the statement that it is merely imaginary and that he should use his will power to overcome it.

Some doctors seem to think that if a man's heart is acting irregularly or his stomach is not doing its work properly, why it is all right for them to give it attention and treat the man, but if a patient comes along who has perhaps dissipated to excess in his younger days, or has maybe fallen into vicious habits, thoughtlessly or without any real moral fault of his own, and is now suffering the results of this, it is way beneath the dignity of the doctor to give him a particle of consideration.

I think differently. So far as I am concerned, I see no chance to regain my opinions on the subject, for I know I have given relief to many that would have become mere human driftwood if they could not have had the encouragement of someone who would look at their case with the whiff of attention and give them the encouragement that the knowledge of the case and medicines properly given would afford them.

I know that much I am saying to you I have said again and again before this, but it is all a subject that bears repetition and does no one any harm to read over and over, for I know I am right and I know there are some things in this line that are worthy of repetition.

I know, for instance, that diagnosis is the most important thing of all. I know these cases go drifting from one doctor to the other, failing to get any relief, when a more intimate knowledge of their case will very often give a cure that otherwise might seem impossible.

I know, too, it is a great mistake to keep treating a man again and again, giving relief to symptoms and not thinking of the underlying condition that keeps up the symptoms. I know, too, many cases can be thoroughly relieved and cured by a little attention to detail and I know, too, that while mercury may be good in syphilis and in certain conditions that occur during the disease, the iodides may be of value, yet I know that they may be given too indiscriminately and without that attention to detail that brings the best of results.

Then, I am just as well assured that when it comes to deep urethral trouble, the chory affections that follow gonorrhea, etc., entirely too much rough treatment has in the past been used and I believe the profession is gradually getting around to my view of the case that mild and soothing effects are the effects to be brought about.

Outside of any feelings the patient may have about it, which ought to be paramount, yet in my estimation, the rough, harsh treatments, such as the use of nitrate of silver solutions and the passage of instruments unless absolutely necessary, are all wrong; for they do not lead to the curing of the patient. The same may be said about the treatment of piles and other rectal diseases on which I hope to a little later have something of importance to say, for I have some definite and decided views on the subject.

Yours for health and vitality,

CHEAP COTTON GONE FOREVER AND NEW ERA OF PROSPERITY DAWNS FOR SOUTHERN STATES

By Walter Parker.
New Orleans, December 25.—(Special).—Ever since 1903, when southern speculators won their first great success in the fight for high prices against the New York bears by receiving all the cotton in the New York stock on extract and then demanding more, the south has studied cotton market conditions along the line of the cotton to that time only the higher type of professional trader was in position to ferret out the cause and anticipate the course of important price movements. Now many men whose interest in cotton is that of the business man dependent upon the general prosperity, find themselves in position to analyze not only cotton crop conditions and the relationship of supply to demand, but the drift, significance and advantage to be gained from the south's domination of the world's raw cotton supply. A monster value of such education and enlightenment is at this time being computed, and is realizable in only when leading economists and statesmen, not allied with the cotton come to the front and point the way to greater profits and more prosperity for all classes of people in the cotton belt.

Advance at Door of South.

At New Orleans, a wealthy merchant, a deep thinker and a really well-informed man, in a conversation with the writer, lays bare many facts of serious consideration. He says to the writer that fortune looking at the gates of the west, and to let the present pass without a thorough knowledge of the south, appears to be nothing short of a part of her press, as intelligent citizens, who are of the section in question, mean more to the nation could accomplish in a few years of intelligent conversations with the writer, than in a hundred years of always taking an interest in the cotton belt.

the business was greatly depressed, on account of the panic of the year previous, and a large amount of labor was unemployed, which condition does not extend today, and as the entire world, so to speak, is on the crest of prosperity, the masses-at-large could well afford at present to pay higher prices than last year with less inconvenience. On account of the higher price of grain in the west and all manufacturers doing a successful business in the east at present, the buying power of the United States is such that an advance of a small per cent on manufactured goods will have no effect upon the consumption, and, personally, I believe the mills of this country will consume, this year, at least 5,000,000 bales, regardless of prices; but for the sake of argument, let us say the United States mills, this year, consume only 4,500,000.

According to Hester's report, December 10, the mills of the United States have taken 1,727,000 and, therefore, have yet to secure 2,773,000, an extremely short supply. We have exported 2,295,000, and, therefore, there only remain available for the balance of the world 2,827,000, making a total available supply for the world, this year, 5,122,000, against their takings last year of 5,856,000. It must be remembered that this small supply is not only for the mills until the 1st of September, but the foreign mills from about the middle of October to the 1st of November, and the United States mills from the middle of September to the first of October before new supplies will be available, so it is absolutely necessary on the first of September, every season, for the mills to show a reasonable carry-over.

mills continue sleeping, it is apparent before this year passes heavy purchases will likely be made in Liverpool for shipment back to the states, in which case our market will seem much higher than Liverpool's all through the spring and summer.

"I find the general impression to be 15 or 16 cents a fancy price for cotton. Taking eight cents as a basis of cost of production, cotton at sixteen cents would be a short advance in the world can easily shift its diet, when necessary; but for the entire civilized world to shift its diet to substitute for cotton, and a shortage in this article will, necessarily, be more seriously felt by what is termed the civilized world than any other product known of, as the entire world depends upon the cotton crop of the south. Are we to be such fools as not to realize the situation?"

Advance Not Felt by Consumer.

The main point that strikes the writer is a heavy advance can occur in cotton, and a heavy advance in the price of the raw material, and the advance is not felt, whatever, by the consumer. The cost of manufacturing flour from wheat is from one cent to one and a half cents per bushel on corn or wheat would be felt by the consumer. The cost of manufacturing a pair of trousers from cotton is from one cent to one and a half cents per pound on cotton. The cost of manufacturing a pair of trousers from cotton is from one cent to one and a half cents per pound on cotton.

Bales Are Short.

August? If this could only be done, there would be such an enormous demand developed for September and October shipment that such parties as would sell their cotton would be compelled to pay so heavily for their experience they would be afraid to continue to attempt such tactics from year to year in the future; and with two prosperous years, the farmers should be able to accumulate sufficient client money to market their crop during the early ginning season in such small proportions at the beginning of the year that they would be sure to average about as good prices for their crop early in the season as they would later on.

"It looks as if nature has come to our assistance at last and will demonstrate to the world before this season passes the real resources and importance of the south. Why should such cotton lands, only in a limited area, be worth so much less than wheat lands, which product can be grown in almost every climate? What would twenty-cent cotton as a permanent basis mean to the south? Increased values of lands which, of course, would mean increased values in the cost of estimating the cost of marketing cotton. Increased land values in cotton, and increased cotton wealth, which means good roads, prosperity and general development. What would twenty-cent cotton mean to the maintenance of the United States? Almost as much as it would to the south, for the following reasons: We have a million bales or more, and if values could be brought up to average twenty cents, instead of ten cents, it would mean an increase of 100,000,000 of exports in our foreign commerce. With this increase of balance in trade in favor of the south, the yearly in cash would mean our credits abroad would be vastly increased and result in enormous development of the south and all other industries. Our financial position before the world would be so much stronger that gold would be so much more necessary at any time, and our general financial position such that it would not require many years to pay the debt of the country to the rest of the world. It certainly appears as if New York, as much as interested in maintaining high values for cotton as the south, on account of same being so largely exported. Low prices for cotton mean a reduction in the balance of trade, which means gold exports and general depression in stocks and bonds. It appears to the writer the present opportunity is one offered only in a generation to a people. The question is, will the southern people grasp the situation and educate the world to slightly higher prices for cotton, or will they let the present opportunity slip from their grasp and be content with corn bread and bacon for the future? If they do, under existing conditions, they deserve no better."

Kansas Hen Prophecies

(Topeka Dispatch to The New York Times.)

The helpful hen, famed in Kansas song and story, is responsible for the prophecy that interests the state from the Missouri river to the Colorado border.

Early in the forenoon of June 11 last Mrs. Ralph Fullen, wife of a farmer, responded to the daily cattle call and went to the chicken house to gather the eggs. Imbedded in the shell of one were characters which spelled "Drought 1911." The egg was examined and talked about by Mr. Fullen's neighbors in Republic county and a few days ago the owner of the egg wrote a letter to Secretary C. B. Burn, in which he said:

"A most remarkable freak of nature occurred at my place on June 11 last. A hen laid an egg with letters and figures on it and they are so arranged as to spell 'Drought 1911.' This may seem incredible to you, but the egg will speak for itself. If the most remarkable freak of nature I have ever observed and I thought it would be proper to write to you about it. I would be glad to have it examined by experts and placed on exhibition at the capitol building, where people could see it. If you are interested in the phenomenon of nature as manifested in poultry products, write to me and I will at once send you the egg."

No Substitute for Cotton.

"If cotton had a reasonable substitute, the situation would be different, but today it stands the only article without a substitute. "Already I hear talk of what big money is going to be made if the market for cotton should fall. The early fall and winter months short. Now, this is the main point I think should be circulated by the southern press and the cotton shirter cautioned about feeding his pearls to swine. There is no possible chance for the south to ever become a prosperous or powerful section of this country with a low price for cotton. Prosperity and money are connected with the development, and the south will never have it unless cotton sells at good prices. With the small crop this year, the world will easily require fifteen million bales next year, and should not the Farmers' Union at the present time attempt to educate the farmers not to plant next season too heavy an increase, but about the size crop they did last year? If the speculators insist on selling the market short, anticipating a decline when the rush of cotton reaches the market, can't the farmers be educated to simply stand 'pat' and not sell a pound below the average prices that will rule between this coming May and

PIERPONT MORGAN OF CELESTIAL EMPIRE

TELLS OF CHANCES FOR FOREIGN CAPITAL

(Copyright, 1909, by Frank G. Carpenter.)

Shanghai, 1909. — (Special Correspondence.) — I have just returned from an interview with one of the richest and ablest men of all Asia. I refer to Sheng Kung Pao, the Pierpont Morgan of China; and, I might say, the Rockefeller of the East. Sheng is worth his tens of millions. Like Pierpont Morgan, he started life poor, and, like him, he has multiplied his inherited fortune many-fold. All his life he has been the organizer of great enterprises, and today his financial fingers are mixed up in every profitable undertaking on this side the globe. He owns railroads, factories, mines and steamships. He has a steel plant 600 miles up the Yangtze River, which is capitalized at $15,000,000, and has mountains of iron and great beds of coal not far away. It was Sheng who had much to do with organizing the telegraph for China. It was he who built the railroad from Hankow to Peking, and he got the concession for the Americans to construct a road from Canton to Hankow.

Sheng Kung Pao is one of the leading officials of this empire. He succeeded Li Hung Chang as the government minister of commerce, and he is now the vice minister of the Imperial board of communications. He is also a chief owner of the China Merchants' Steamship Company, and is largely interested in the Imperial Bank of China. He is by all odds the best financial authority among the Celestials, and his ideas as to the present conditions are of great value.

Sheng Kung Pao at Home.

It was at Sheng Kung Pao's home that I met him. This is in a section of Shanghai where the land is so valuable that one has to almost plate it with silver to buy it. Sheng's establishment consists of a half dozen great buildings, any one of which would be a mansion in Washington or Chicago. Its grounds cover more than ten acres, and are surrounded by walls so high that you cannot see over them. Wide drives lead round the grounds, and the whole is kept like a park. One of the buildings, devoted to Sheng's business offices, is as large as that of a government department. Among the others are residences, occupied by Sheng and his wife, and his relatives. The residences are all as beautifully furnished, and some have a great framework in front of them, over which matting can be stretched in summer to shut out the sun. There is no sign of the poverty which we associate with the ordinary Celestial. Sheng belongs to the rich, and, like his class, he wears satins and velvets and entertains in great style. His butler always has champagne on tap, and among the dishes served at his feasts are pigeon-egg stew, shark fins and birds'-nest soup, the latter costing several dollars a plate.

It was in the finest of his buildings that his excellency received me. It is a combination of Chinese and foreign architecture, built of gray brick, three stories high, and of vast extent. Passing through a wide hall I came into a court over which a framework of poles, matting was stretched. This was surrounded by rooms, most of which are intended for receptions.

The servants led us into a large parlor furnished in Chinese style. Heavy chairs of blackwood, inlaid with mother-of-pearl and wonderfully carved, stood against the walls. There was a divan at the back, and in the center of this a low table, upon which two guests could rest their elbows as they sat there and chatted. There were Chinese paintings on the walls and here shone out a beautifully written text of the Chinese classics. In the center of the room was a table. This was of carved teakwood. It had no cover, but with a view to my reception, it was set with refreshments of various kinds. There were cakes, fruits and candies, and other delicacies were brought in during the audience.

I was able to meet Sheng Kung Pao by an introduction from Dr. John C. Ferguson, an American who is high in the confidence of the leading Chinese officials. He was for a long time, and is now, one of the confidential foreign advisers of Sheng, and he has been associated in a similar capacity with the viceroys of Nanking and Wuchang. He accompanied me to the palace and performed the ceremony of introduction after which he left me with Sheng and the interpreter.

Tete-a-Tete With a Chinese Millionaire.

We had but a short time to wait. His excellency came in through a side door and as Dr. Ferguson presented me he reached out his hand and shook mine in American fashion. He used the right hand, giving me a strong grip with his long yellow fingers. As he did so he looked me straight in the face, and his bright black eyes seemed to be searching my soul. Indeed his eyes were so keen that the remainder of his personality was thrown into the background, and it was some time before I took in the details. Then I observed that the eyes belonged to an old Chinese, of medium height and stooping shoulders. They shone out of a narrow complexion, over high cheekbones and from a rather thin face. His excellency was dressed in a long gown of blue silk. He had a black silk hat on his head; the rim of which was turned up all around and out of the back of which extended a broad waving feather. He wore a white turban over collar and his coat had buttons of gold.

The great financier smiled as he greeted me. He led me across the room and motioned me to sit down at the table, giving me a chair at his left, which is the seat of honor in China. As we sat there, our elbows almost touching, rested his left hand on the table, and, as he became interested in the talk, now and then tapped the table with his nails. As he did so I could not keep my eyes off his hand. The nails on the last three fingers—that is, on all of the fingers except the index finger—were at least three inches long, and the thumb nail stood out like a spoon. When not tapping his excellency's hand, resting on the table, had the tips of the fingers raised above the table itself to the highest of an ordinary glass tumbler, and the wrist was well up off the table. The finger nails were as white as ivory, and it struck me that it must be a troublesome matter to keep them so clean.

China's Steel Industry.

The conversation opened with the discussion of the Han Yang steel works, which I told his excellency I had just visited. I asked him how they were doing. He replied that they were steadily increasing in efficiency and in their ability to turn out modern nails, structural steel and other such materials. He said that the company had already exported pig iron to America, and that it could, if it would, now sell iron there in competition with the United States steel trust at a profit. He said that the day would come when China would produce all its own steel, and that every province would eventually have its own factories and foundries. Sheng expects much from Japan as a purchaser of Chinese iron and steel, and he considers our Pacific coast a legitimate tributary of the industrial China of the future.

I asked him as to his iron mines. He replied that the supply of ore is almost inexhaustible, and is finer than that of most parts of the world. It is as pure as the famed iron of Sweden, and is much more easily won. As to the coal he is now using, this makes fine coke, and China has been exporting coke to Japan. His excellency believes that China has all the materials to make it a great manufacturing country, and that its people are naturally fitted to be the chief industrial nation of Asia.

China's Railroad Era.

I here referred to the new railroads which China has projected, and asked him if their construction would be pushed. He replied: "We intend to build new railroads just as fast as we can. We need them, and the Imperial government realizes that fact, and will do all it can to aid in the construction. The first roads to be built will be trunk lines, connecting the chief centers of population. We must have them on political grounds, as well as for business development. Railroads are a necessary necessity to the new civilization, and to China's holding the place she should have in the Far East and the world. We need a strong central government; and to that end must be able to send troops from one part of the empire to another by rail, on telegraph lines, and by other means. We will build our trunk lines, branch lines and feeders will rapidly follow. The traffic will be large, and the roads will soon become profitable. As soon as our people realize that money can be made from railroad enterprises, there will be no trouble in raising the capital necessary to carry them on. So far they are a new thing to us, and as we are a conservative people, we are cautious about embarking in them."

Foreign Capital for China.

"Your excellency was among the first to advise the government that it should secure foreign capital for building its railroads, were you not?"

"Yes. But that policy became unpopular. The cry of 'China for the Chinese, and for the Chinese alone' was raised, and while our people were inclined to build everything with their own money and to accept no help from outside. The cost of railroad building, however, is so great, and our people understand it so little, that they hesitate to invest, and are now coming to favor foreign loans."

"And, indeed, I still believe in foreign loans for railroad building," continued Sheng Kung Pao. "I think it will pay us to borrow the money, and let the roads earn the interest. The situation in regard to such loans has changed during recent years. In the past the roads were mortgaged as security for the bonds; but the government is now guaranteeing them, and the roads, to a certain extent, are free from such incumbrances. A guarantee by the Chinese government is better than that of any railroad. It has all China back of it, and the interest is absolutely sure."

"But I understand you want to borrow some millions of dollars to extend your steel works at Han-yang, and that you are asking the Chinese to put up the money. Why do you not go abroad for a loan of that kind?"

"We do not think it advisable. Similar obligations which we have entered into during recent years have caused international trouble. The men who borrow the money, in case of a dispute as to the settlement, are likely to call in the government to which they belong to enable them to bring things their way, and that without regard to justice or right. The mortgage of private enterprises and public works has, in certain cases, given the control of such works over to the foreigners who made the loan, and that we cannot permit. We feel that we Chinese should control our own mines, and that in the present conditions of affairs it is not safe for us to go outside for capital so secured."

China's New Bank.

"Your excellency is connected with the Imperial Bank of China? Is that a government bank?"

"No. It is a commercial institution, with headquarters at Shanghai, and branches at Hankow and Peking. It has a capital of 5,000,000 taels over half of which is paid in. The only government bank we have is the Hu Pu bank, which has its headquarters in Peking, and branches scattered here and there over the country."

"Will China ever have a national banking system, such as Japan or the United States?"

"Yes. I think so, although it will probably be some time before it can be established. It is one of the crying needs of the empire, and would be of enormous good, not only to the government, but to all industries."

"Will you ever have postal savings banks?"

"Not soon. But I should like to see them established, and they are bound to come. They are invaluable in the teaching of thrift, and in making a place for the small savings of the people. With a stable government such institutions will be very popular, and they would enormously increase our national wealth. They would make us the richest people of the world, for our savings depositors would be millions in number. I should like to see industrial banks, such as the Japanese have, established in China, and we shall probably have agricultural banks."

The New Mints and Banknotes.

"How about your new coinage?"

"There is a movement afoot to standardize it. We are sadly in need of a uniform coinage, and it is bound to come."

"Will the unit be the silver dollar or the tael?"

"Most probably the dollar. Many of our people have come to know that coin fairly well, and we like the decimal system upon which it is based. I think it is better than the tael."

"Will China ever be on a gold basis?"

"In time, yes; but not soon. I should like to see all of our finances managed on the gold standard."

"How about the new banks which are being issued in so many parts of the empire? Are they properly secured?"

"I think they are all right now," replied the Chinese financier. "Such notes as are already in use are safe enough, and I have no doubt but that they will be safe for some time to come. I consider them a dangerous medium of exchange, however, and I can easily imagine conditions which might arise in connection with them which would create great financial disturbance and possible loss."

The New Education.

"I am a man seventy years old. My hands were very sore and cracked open on the insides for over a year, with large sores. They would crack open and bleed, itch, burn and ache so that I could not sleep and could do but little work. They were so bad that I could not dress myself in the morning. They would bleed and the blood dropped on the floor. I called on two doctors, but they did me no good. I could get nothing to do me any good till I got the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. About a year ago my daughter got a cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment and in one week from the time I began to use them my hands were all healed up and they have not been a mite sore since. I would not be without the Cuticura Remedies."

originators of the new education? You established the Nan Yang college at Shanghai, and the Chinese university at Tientsin. Has modern education come to stay?"

"Undoubtedly so. The Chinese classics are of great value in training the mind and soul; but as far as business matters are concerned, they are ethical rather than practical. I want the classics kept in our schools, but I think the modern sciences should supplement them."

How are your training your own children?

"I have two boys who are learning English. They are now going to the college here, and I shall send them abroad to Europe or the United States, as soon as they are prepared to enter the universities of those countries."

"Whom do you think is of the most value to China, the man trained at home along the old lines or the one educated abroad?"

"I think both kinds of training are necessary. They are both needed to make an all-around man, the man of business and the man of morals, and, in short, the best man for us."

Opium and Foot Binding.

At this moment the champagne was brought in, and with it came the red visiting cards of some Chinese officials. In high society here the entrance of the wine always means the close of an interview, and when your host asks you to drink you know that the time has come for you to depart. For this reason my last questions were rapidly put:

"What does your excellency think of the new constitution? Are the Chinese prepared for it?"

"Not now, perhaps, but they will be by the time it goes into effect. We are to have eight years of education, and at the end we shall have a new China."

"Will you be able to wipe out the opium evil?"

"Yes. But its abolition must be gradual. The confirmed smoker cannot give up the habit at the wink of an eye. Some may be able to stop, but others will hold on till their death. It is only from the young that we can expect much as to the abolition of opium. The custom is already considered disgraceful, and if we can keep it so, we can get rid of the evil."

How about foot binding?

"That will go, too. The better class women have stopped binding the feet of their children. The custom begins to be unpopular. I have no bound feet in my household, and I am glad to say that the day has come for the bound foot to go."

At this point we had already taken three slips of champagne. There was a crowd of Chinese callers waiting outside, and I knew it was high time to leave. As I rose, his excellency again gave me his hand, saying he regretted he had not had a chance to ask some questions of me, and that our whole conversation had been taken up with his answers to queries of mine.

LET EVERY MAN AFFLICTED WITH HYDROCELE, VARICOCELE, PILES, GALL STONES AND ANY FORM OF SKIN DISEASE READ CAREFULLY WHAT FOLLOWS—NO DETENTION FROM BUSINESS.

DOCTOR ALLEN SEES AND TREATS PATIENTS PERSONALLY

I MAKE THIS STATEMENT SO YOU WILL KNOW THAT YOU CONSULT A CELEBRATED SPECIALIST WHO SEES AND TREATS PATIENTS PERSONALLY. I HAVE HAD FIFTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE. A TRUE SPECIALIST POSSESSES SKILL, KNOWLEDGE AND EXPERIENCE. WHO ARE ACQUAINTED IN SUCH A WAY THAT NO OTHER CAN SHARE IT. REMEDY SHOULD NOT BE CONFUSED WITH SO-CALLED MEDICAL COMPANIES. COME TO MY OFFICE AND SEE HOW AN EXPERT SPECIALIST WILL TREAT YOU, AND HOW QUICKLY YOU CAN BE CURED TO STAY CURED.

MOST TIME-SEAVING, MOST NATURAL, MOST SAFE. MANY CASES PERMANENTLY CURED BY ONE TREATMENT. No Severe Operation. A Radical and Permanent Cure. NO DETENTION FROM BUSINESS.

SPECIAL DISEASES CURED

I concentrate my facilities on a single line of diseases. I treat Varicocele, Hydrocele, Hemorrhoids, Stricture, Nervous Debility, Stomach, Liver, Kidney, Bladder and Prostatic Diseases, Blood Poison, Skin Diseases, Eczema, Scabies, Ringworm, etc. EASES OF MEN. I am certainly prepared to cure by experience and equipment, which are the keystones to success. I have the best equipped medical office in the South.

Contact with many patients has given me practical knowledge. A few hours or days under my treatment may add years and health to your life. If you are suffering from disease I will examine you and make a microscopical and chemical analysis of secretions to detect pathological and bacteriological conditions. Every gentleman should take this opportunity to learn his true condition.

Varicocele—Hydrocele

I daily demonstrate that Varicocele and Hydrocele can be cured, in such a satisfactory way that the constitution is preserved and strengthened, pain ceases, swelling subsides, a healthy circulation is rapidly re-established and instead of the depressing conditions strength and vigor is diffused into the system.

Specific Blood Poison

Scientific treatment only should be used in combating this loathsome disease. I introduce it into the blood, which is reorganized, neutralizing and expelling poison from the system. New blood thus formed supplies and rebuilds the tissues in such a way that the patient recovers his normal state of health, strength and soundness.

Kidney, Bladder, Stricture and Prostatic Diseases

With these diseases you may have more complications than are presented by any other diseased organs. By my so arching illumination of the bladder I determine accurately the disease and by microscopical examination and analysis I determine the condition of the kidneys, thus laying foundations for scientific treatment.

Nervous Debility—Loss of Vigor

My treatment is endorsed by the leading nerve specialists of Europe and America. For the treatment and cure of diseases of the nervous system, such as Loss of Memory, Impaired Faculties, Migraine, Headaches, Sleeplessness, Lack of Ambition, Palsy, Infantile Paralysis and all weaknesses induced by nervous complications and excessive repletion of the conditions essential to your future health and happiness. Treatment and inducement of this treatment can be seen at my office.

Diseases of Women

Such as Falling of the Womb, Menstrual Disorders, Unnatural Discharges, Pain in Back, Headaches, Dizziness and Nervous Disorders, speedily corrected and cured.

New Life in Worn Out Bodies By My Methods.

ARE YOU nervous and despondent, weak or debilitated, tired, nervous, memory poor, easily fatigued, excited, irritable, eyes sunken, red and blurred, pimples, rashes, blemishes, haggard looking back; bone pains, hair loss, ulcers, sore throat, lack of energy and all other ailments, I will cure you for life.

My Best Guarantee, "Pay When Cured."

I cure with the same guarantee of success all Chronic Diseases of the Kidney, Bladder and Urinary Tract, Stricture, Hydrocele, Rupture, Uterine Diseases, Gonorrhea, Blood Poisoning, Eczema, Rheumatism, Catarrhal Affections and all Nervous, Chronic and Private Diseases of Men and Women. OUT-OF-TOWN MEN VISITING THE CITY consult me at once as I may be cured before returning home. Many cases can be cured in two visits.

No Charge for Advice. Consultation and examination free. Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m.

Write and give me full description of your case in your own words. Complete correspondence consultation costs you nothing, and if I can cure you, I will cure you for life.

DR. J.F. ALLEN 7 1/2 W. ATLANTA

I HAVE A BIG LOT OF WAGONS

I am selling some of them, but I am not satisfied with the situation. If some of my wagonless friends don't send me some orders I'll be in the notion to "start something."

I have the nicest and freshest lot of rolling stock ever put up. I want lookers. Won't you look?

NO MORE GLOOMY HOURS. The old saying that "a little nonsense now and then is relished by the best of men" would be just as "pat" if it were "a little humor now and then." etc. The sense of humor is one of the most strongly developed characteristics of the American people and the man or woman who does not enjoy a good joke or funny story lacks one of the elements that make life worth living. The Kentuckian is proving to be one of the most popular of the humorous vein. It is a spicy sheet of semi-factitious, toned down with richness and flavor of true Kentucky humor. It is a rich, rare, racy journal in every sense of the word. A few moments spent in perusing it will drive away the blues and create a smile to the four corners of the face. If addicted to groans, sighs and boo-hoos send for one year, 25c six months. The Kentuckian, Desk 20, Franklin, Ky.

REAL ESTATE TALK BY ADAIR.

Will central real estate keep on going up in price? After reaching a record value of $5,000 a front foot and $110 a square foot, will it keep on increasing in value? These same questions worried people 40 years ago. When Whitehall st. property kept on going up in price until it reached a figure of $100 a front foot. It took the breath away from the old-timers. They said: "Gee whiz, land can't ever be worth any more than that."

So after arriving at the astonishing price of $100 a foot it kept going higher—up to $200 and finally to $500. Would it ever reach a thousand? Traders in those days gasped when land sold at $1,000 a foot. Now the $5,000 mark has been passed, and we must set the standard to be reached at a much higher figure. It is a fact that there is land in Atlanta today worth more than $5,000 a front foot. And there are certain snug little places on the Great White Way that would sell for more than $10 a square foot.

Investors do not usually begin to buy real estate until it gets to be valuable. A man of means does not care to tie up his hundred-dollar building lots. He could go down to Lonesome City, on the railroad junction, and buy building lots on the ground floor. High-priced city real estate appeals to people of means, who want absolute security in their investments. In other words, central property does not catch the eye of the big investors until its value has been amply demonstrated. It is very probable that prices up in the center will keep getting higher and higher, becoming firmer at the high figure.

These big values of central property will certainly be reflected into the semi-central zone. Bear constantly in mind one thing: That the record-breaking prices being paid for up-town real estate is paid by men who need no guardians. They are not amateurs or new-comers, but are traders who know well what they are about. The mere fact that they pay the prices mentioned indicates that a still higher value may be expected. Prices will never recede from the figures thus firmly established, but from this permanent base will tend further upward.

Let the small trader now look to his opportunities. He has a large field almost to himself. The big purchases do not go out much and invade the territory of the small trader. He has a wonderfully inviting field before him right now in the property on the fringes of the center and around the outer edges of the city. There is a place for little traders to work in and make money. Every dollar they invest in the more snug little places the big capital turned loose up town.

A city that spends $5,500,000 a year in private buildings is a safe one to invest money in. Atlanta's building permits run along with cities like Louisville and New Orleans, places of 200,000 population; she shows a rate of growth out of her class. Along with this vast amount of building there comes increased bank clearings, increased postal receipts, increased population and increased trade. This can mean only one thing—increased value of real estate. It can indicate only one course for the investor—buy Atlanta property.

In the next few cold winter months the shrewd trader ought to lay in some good bargains in expectation of a promising trade for 1911. Most buyers are disposed to defer to purchase, to "wait until spring"—and it would be a stroke of good judgment for the quick-witted investor to jump right in now in the dead of winter and make his purchase. Things are going to be lively next spring. The old trader can catch it in his bones. Conditions justify good trading, and all the signs point that way.

In making real estate investments it is well to have the assistance of an experienced real estate agent. It is not always safe to go dabbling into any kind of trading without a guide. The real estate agent constantly watches the market, and keeps informed as to all things pertaining to intricate growth of the city and the features that affect real estate values. In the wide and varied expansion of a big, surging city like Atlanta, with a congested business center pushing out, and a residential zone constantly widening, there are many opportunities to plant idle money where it will grow.

On January 1 all the national banks in Atlanta will reduce the interest on savings deposits to 2½ per cent. A rate of 4 per cent was just enough to tempt a considerable amount of cash to remain in the banks, but at 2½ per cent there is going to be some restless capital in Atlanta seeking to earn more income. Renting property which yields all the way from 8 to 14 per cent will be in demand. Capital has been a little shy for two or three years, especially the moderate amounts. Big fellows with plenty to spare have bought liberally and are still ready to buy. But people with small amounts, fearing to risk all, have been timid.

It is now universally conceded that all chance for alarm is over, and the moderate sized bank account will begin to move. Trade ought to be good next year in amounts of $1,000 to $5,000. You readily see the reason. Of course, the great majority will defer a purchase "until spring," but a certain number of buyers are sure to reason out the advisability of making a real estate deal in the dead of winter.

For spring always comes, and with it the sap begins to rise in investors as well as trees and shrubs. Along in April the steam-heated apartment (now so popular) becomes unbearable, and visions rise of the pretty cottage in the woods with rosy children playing on a lawn. The wise old trader goes out in the winter time with snow and sleet on the ground, and buys up trees and land to cut up into lots when the birds begin to sing.

We have done an unusually good year's business, keeping steadily at it and never for an instant losing faith in Atlanta. Our rent business grows constantly from month to month, and our sale business gains consistently. We try to retain all our old customers by giving good returns, and we make for new ones by aggressive methods. The real estate man becomes peculiarly attached to his own city, and to us there is only one place, and that is Atlanta. To an abiding faith in that name we attribute in some measure what success has come to us.

TO ALL OUR FRIENDS AND PATRONS A VERY MERRY XMAS AND HAPP

MOUNTAIN GIRDLED KNOXVILLE SUMMONS NATION TO FIRST APPALACHIAN EXPOSITION

Electric Tennessee City Plans Great Show for Next September.

WILL EXPLOIT AND DEVELOP
APPALACHIAN TERRITORY

Directed at Creating Sentiment for Forest and Stream Preservation; It Will Also Wake World to the Possibilities of the Mountainous South.

Knoxville, Tennessee, known throughout the south as the "City of Achievement," will, between September 15 and October 15, of 1910, invite the world to her gates, to witness the first Appalachian exposition in American history.

The idea is one of absolute uniqueness, and is destined to loosen the forces of greater development upon the great Appalachian region of six southern states, heretofore largely deprived of the commercial, agricultural and industrial stimulus of civilization because of mountain barriers.

The city of Knoxville argues that since it is the geographic center of this widespread territory, it is here that a display should be held of the marvelous resources and possibilities along the Appalachians that wait only the practical magic of capital and the colonizer.

Every year the exposition will be repeated on an ascending scale, so that it will constitute a faithful record

W. M. J. OLIVER, President, Nationally Famous as a Chairman Committee on the Appalachian Exposition.

J. B. CRISWELL, Chairman, Nationally Famous as a Chairman Committee on the Appalachian Exposition.

J. W. BOWLES, Member, Nationally Famous as a Chairman Committee on the Appalachian Exposition.

of the southern states originate, and portions of the six states are veritable argosies of mineral and timber wealth, especially the hardwoods.

The present committee, headed by William J. Oliver, recent bidder on the Panama canal, and perhaps the most notable individual contractor in the southern states, J. B. Criswell, advertising and sales manager of the Haynes-Henson Shoe Company, is chairman of the committee on publicity and promotion, a guarantee, because of his magnificent success in the field of publicity, that the promotion of the big show will be well directed.

Joseph W. Bowles, advertising manager of the William J. Oliver Manufacturing Company, is also a member of this important committee. Mr. Bowles, while still a young man, has done notable feats in supervising the publicity work of the Oliver interests, among the most extensive in the south.

Officials and Directors.
The following list of officers and directors reveals many of the men most instrumental in placing Knoxville in the national limelight:

William J. Oliver, president; George E. Helm, vice president; Jesse Thomas, second vice president; Carey F. Spence, fourth vice president; O. M. Tate, treasurer; W. M. Goodman, secretary and director general.

Executive Committee.—Charles H. Harvey, A. T. Doss, D. C. Chapman, George E. Helm, O. M. Tate.

Directors.—William J. Oliver, George E. Helm, O. M. Tate, M. D. Arnold, B. A. Morton, A. T. Doss, D. C. Chapman, R. S. Hazen, W. M. Goodman, C. H. Harvey, C. F. Spence, John P. Kern, D. M. Chambliss, G. F. Milton, A. F. Sanford, James G. Sterchi, C. B. Atkin, Jesse Thomas, W. J. Savage, J. L. Deaver and E. H. Scharringhaus.

The Show's Originator.
The father of the Appalachian exposition is W. M. Goodman, secretary of the Commercial Club of Knoxville. It is he who has engineered many of the publicity plans that have widened the frontiers of Knoxville's business.

The exposition has been a dream with him for many years, and he is actively engaged in rounding the entire territory contiguous to Knoxville to the importance and the opportunities of the coming display. Mr. Goodman is director general of the exposition.

The company is organized with a capital stock of $100,000. Already fully $100,000 has been expended on the exposition grounds, and this is simply a beginning of the sums ultimately to be thus invested.

The exposition site has been chosen at the beautiful Chilhowee park, accessible by a double-tracked street car line with ample transportation facilities.

The natural beauty of the place, with its lake and walks and drives and shrubbery, will be materially enhanced by landscape plans, even now in process of realization.

In addition to the 76 acres in the original plot, the company has leased grounds adjoining, upon which it will construct a giant automobile and race track, where feats in aviation, auto races and other events will be held.

Great Agricultural Buildings.
It will be one of the objects of this enterprise to demonstrate to the farmers of the cotton belt and to the world at-large the possibility of making farming pay without dependence upon money crops such as cotton and tobacco.

With this end in view, the greatest agricultural display building ever erected for any exposition is in course of construction and will house exhibits from the mountain portions of the six states included within the radius of Knoxville's influence.

Persons unacquainted with the characteristics of the Blue Ridge and connecting chains of mountains have little conception of the forage and food and fruit potentialities of this region. Buried gold, metaphorically speaking, lies waiting hereabouts for the men earnest enough and energetic enough to dig for it.

The Timber Industries.
Vast among the assets of the Appalachian region are its timber stores. Native hardwoods are present in abundance, as yet hardly tapped, by the professional lumberman, and offering splendid financial returns under scientific and preservative forestation.

Mining, too, of coal is a great present and a greater future industry. The forthcoming exposition will demonstrate its present status and its coming proportions in the most practical manner.

In a building specially constructed will be an exact replica of coal mines, limiting the mine mouth, and carrying out the scheme of tunnels and galleries. A mine tram-road will lead into the recesses of the artificial cavern, so that the visitor will enjoy the novel sensation of inspecting an exact replica of the mine mouth, and will, also set forth what must be done and the big results that will follow upon its accomplishment.

A Demonstrative Exposition.
Director General Goodman in discussing the exposition, said:

"The keynote of this exposition, that which differentiates it from all other southern displays and makes it rank next to the great Cotton States and International exposition in Atlanta, is its demonstrative nature."

"In a practical way through the use of actual object lessons, we are going to indicate the imminent value of conserving the resources of this great mountain empire, and of developing them where now the task of exploitation has been but feebly exerted."

"Knoxville, personally, feels a sense of responsibility for this widespread territory. We are nearly its strategic center, and are in a position to know its advantages and its need of encouragement better than any other municipality in the south."

"In the opinion of the Commercial Club of Knoxville, the resources and needs of the Appalachian country require only to be made known to insure their speedy development and fulfillment."

Will Enrich the Nation.
"The success of this exposition, too, means the exploitation of this region, and that, in turn, means the enrichment of the nation."

"Being held every year, we will maintain nothing less important than a continuous publicity bureau, something now operated by no other southern community with any degree of persistency."

"We are pitching our plans on a broad scale, and invite the manufacturers and the business men of the south generally to cooperate with us. It is to their commercial interest that the resources of this immense principality be developed."

"It is also to the interest of the south generally, farmers and merchants, not to speak of posterity, that the splendid forest resources and the incalculable water power originating in the Appalachians be forever guarded against depletion. And the creation of sentiment to that end is one of the primary objects of this exposition."

"We are exerting ourselves in behalf of neglected sections of America, but one of its greatest sections."

"If we can start the ball of development rolling in its direction and keep it rolling, we will not account our labors as having been vainly invested."

"The men associated with this enterprise, from Mr. Oliver down, are guaranties of its nonsectional scope and of the ability of the company to materialize its plans. Knoxville, as a unit, is rampantly behind this project. The men are wakened as never before in the history of the city, and that is saying much, for Knoxville was one of the first southern cities to appreciate the value of active publicity promotion."

An Assured Success.
Knoxville is going after this proposition with its customary vim and unanimity, which means success, since Knoxville has never yet underwritten any project that did not pan out achievement of large measure."

One of the foremost coal supply depots of the country, one of the greatest manufacturing and agricultural centers in the middle south, this city is splendidly equipped to stage magnificently and to maintain consistently the first Appalachian exposition ever held in the United States.

DR. L. N. HUFF, OPTICIAN.
Dr. L. N. Huff, the popular optician, of 52 West Mitchell street, an old Atlanta boy, having worked his way through the Southern Optical college, of Dallas, Texas, being a post-graduate of that institution, and having, by his business ability and his skill as an optician, built for himself an enviable reputation that classifies him as one of the best of the best. He loves his profession, and nothing gives him more pleasure than to give the proper correction to the most intricate defects of the sight. All such up-to-date business and professional men add worth to our city, and is appreciated by Atlantans and all good citizens.

Charts for Sky Pilots.
(From The New York Tribune.)
At last the pathway hither and yon through the regions above the earth are to be charted. The secretary of state of New York may have been able to justify himself in his suggestion to an applicant for an aliphilic license that he was a little ahead of the season, being perhaps one of those who, while not caring to be the last to lay the old aside, do not care to be the first by which the new is tried. There is some wisdom, also, in his reflection that it would be better for the applicant to wait until he has seen the charts for "then you might change your mind." There is a slight possibility that after the applicant's first flight there won't be enough of his mind, or, indeed, of any other part of him, to change.

But in the meantime, at a meeting of the Imperial Aero Club, in Berlin, presided over by Count Zeppelin, and attended by a number of officers of the general staffs of the army and navy, the preparation of aeronautical maps was discussed. The charts proposed would show the marked variations of the landscape as well as the location of electric wires and other aerial obstructions. It may be assumed, too, that the depth of streams and lakes would be indicated, with suggestions as to the best way to alight in order to hit them. Instructions in regard to the dropping of money wreaths and beer bottles ought to have proper attention, and some provision should be made for the case of an accident.

We are not yet advised as to what is to be done in the case of a pilot who, by daylight it would be possible for him to experience sky pilot to recognize a mountain. And if all the windmills of Holland were to be chartered the map would become a complicated affair. Furthermore, no pilot should receive a license until he has demonstrated his ability to avoid any Don Quixote attacks upon those guided by the land of the dike by soaring one or two strata above them.

MANY ARE SAVED FROM SUICIDE

Salvation Army Makes Annual Report.

London, December 25.—(Special.)—Interesting and pathetic reading is to be found in the annual report of the Salvation Army Anti-Suicide bureau, which has just been issued. We give the following extracts:

"The department continues to do good work. The number of applicants (after allowing for the rush at its inauguration) remains about the same. Experience has greatly helped in classification, and care has been taken, at the first interview to sort out the cases which can better be dealt with through our labor bureau or other social institutions. Lately there has been a larger proportion of applicants who, hearing of the Anti-Suicide bureau, have not waited until they practically had come to an impossible position. Quite a number of business men in difficulty have sought advice in the early stages of their depression, and have been brought to face the altered circumstances in such a way that they did not go under."

"The causes which call for the Anti-Suicide bureau have given for their suicidal tendencies are such as to come under five general headings:

"Financial embarrassment or hopeless poverty.
"Melancholia, proceeding from loneliness and other causes.
"Urges, such as embezzlement, forgery, and the like.
"General causes, such as accidents, sickness and other misfortunes."

"The best of all and professions of which members have been benefited through the efforts of the bureau, include:

"Artists, clergymen, missionaries, military officers, doctors, solicitors, chief constables of America, journalists, architects, old sea captains, journeymen, chemists, actors, builders, engineers, clerks, hotel proprietors and others."

"The report contains the story in brief of a number of cases in which men have been held back from suicide. One case, that of a gentleman's servant may be quoted:

"B. had evidently always suffered from morbid sensitiveness. He was estranged from his wife and his friends. Nevertheless, he was a capable servant, and had found no difficulty in getting good situations, but these, because of his peculiar temper, were of very short duration. At the time he came to us he had been in one of the first families in London for just a few months. He quarrelled with his superior, and naturally authority was upheld. He left without notice, stating that he meant to destroy himself. To add to his trouble, the young woman with whom he had been keeping company broke off the engagement."

"When he reached London he was fully determined to make an end of himself, concluding that there really was nothing to live for. He had previously put a razor in his pocket, and was walking the streets looking for some secluded position. When he saw on a board Salvation Army notice, he entered the building in a half-dazed condition. The treatment received there caused him to unburden himself, and he was passed on to the Anti-Suicide Bureau."

Points to Investigate

As a chain is no stronger than its weakest link, so a motor car is no better than its weakest feature.

A thoroughly good motor car must be much more than an assembling of good features. Every part must operate in absolute unison with every other part so that the car is perfect as a whole.

Not only must the engine work perfectly, but the clutch and transmission system that take the power to the rear axles must be satisfactory. The steel frame must be adequate, the springs must bear the load through every strain, and so on throughout the car.

The Premier car, taken point by point and as a whole, compares most favorably with any car in the world regardless of price. It is a car that appeals at once to mechanical experts.

The Premier ignition is a low tension make and break system, recognized as the best that can be built. It costs much more to build than a high tension system, but it renders the car practically immune from ignition troubles.

The Premier style of multiple disc clutch is the best form of clutch and is coming into general use on the finest types of cars.

The Premier selective sliding gear transmission is recognized as perfect. The Premier has never had a stripped gear.

The Premier frame is probably the strongest of any American car.

The Premier has the greatest amount of effective braking surface of any car built. The Premier has imported annular bearings. The most expensive if first cost is considered, but the most satisfactory for long service.

The Premier crank case is of gun iron, twice as strong as aluminum. The Premier special ribbed rear axle housing is so rigid that no one ever saw one out of alignment.

These are all points to investigate before you purchase a car. They are but a few of the effective features of the Premier.

We urge you to make a thorough study of the best cars of Europe and America and compare them point for point with the Premier. Then you will understand how the Premier has established and maintained year after year a new standard in motor car construction.

The cars for 1910 have forty and sixty-horse power. Beautiful, comfortable, luxurious, they will be a constant source of pride to the most exacting owners. Let us give you a demonstration.

A METHODIST 78 YEARS

RECORD OF MRS. HANCOCK;

CAN ANYONE BEAT THIS?

Leader in Field of Advertising Now With Chicago Firm and a lot of others, some of whom have crossed over the river.

"Very respectfully,"
"Winder, Ga., December 25, 1909."

MRS. J. R. HANCOCK, Of Jefferson, aged 92, who has been an Active Member of the Methodist Church 78 years.

Conference, you stated that Rev. W. A. Osborn, of Atlanta, had been a member of the church 70 years, and perhaps the world's oldest Methodist in point of years of membership, having joined the church when 14 years of age. I noticed, also, in the same paper that Mrs. Jackson Greer was introduced to the conference as being the oldest living woman member of the church, she being 89 years old, for 66 years a member of the church.

"Now, if you will pardon me, I will give you a little sketch of one who can beat those mentioned, in point of years. It is my mother, Mrs. John R. Hancock, who lives in Jackson county, Georgia, and is a member of the Methodist church at Jefferson, Ga. She is 92 years old; joined the Methodist church when she was 14 years old, being a member of the church 78 years. She has been taking her church paper 70 years, or at least since it was first published in Charleston, then in Macon, and now it is The Western Christian Advocate, published in Atlanta. She has never been a year without it; can see to read it as well as she ever did, and enjoys it; looks forward to its weekly visits. She is remarkably bright and cheerful for one of her age; enjoys good health, but was rendered unable to walk two years ago by a fall.

"She takes a great interest in all church work; recently knitted some socks for the children at the orphan's home, and sent them in for a Christmas present. Now, who can beat that?"

"She is a first cousin to the lamented Dr. Jesse Boring, and resides on and owns the home of his birthplace. Many of the members of the North Georgia Conference, at the mention of her name, will recall the pleasant days spent around her fireside, in days gone by. Among others are: George W. Yarbrough, W. J. Cotter, C. C. Cary, M. H. Eakes, W. B. Dillard, R. King, H. B. May, H. F. Barnham, and a number of others."

Mrs. Bush's letter is as follows: "Editor Constitution: I want to correct a little statement I saw in The Constitution a few weeks ago. In the proceedings of the North Georgia

The Men Behind the Show.
One of the most vital features of the projected exposition is the manner in which it will emphasize the necessity of the conservation of the forests and streams of the Appalachians, a subject now being agitated by every intelligent southerner, and already broached by the federal government. It is within this territory that the important rivers of the eastern half

SOCIAL GOSSIP.

Young and old alike joined in the pleasures of the week, and there was every form of entertainment, from the formal dinner party and luncheon to the rollicking fraternity dances of the college and school girl set. Each evening until all hours there was a steady stream of automobiles and carriages conveying the guests to and fro, and the gaieties are to continue during the holidays.

The largest party of the week in the married set and one of the handsomest ever given in Atlanta was that at which Mr. and Mrs. John E. Murphy entertained Wednesday evening.

There were eighty guests entertained, they being invited at 8 o'clock and received by the host and hostess in the drawing room. Eggnog was served downstairs and each spacious apartment was an artistic treat in the decorative scheme carried out. In the dining room the table had in the center a miniature frozen lake, in the center of which were the reindeer and a tiny Santa Claus with a pack on his back. The lake was encircled by a garland of tiny evergreens and a final touch was given by a circle of crystal bowls filled with narcissus and red carnations. Fairy lamps everywhere in the room had red shades and at the base of all the windows were potted poinsettias.

On the third floor in the ball room elegant hot supper was served, the guests seated in parties of six and eight around beautifully decorated tables. In the center of each was a Christmas tree hung with gifts and Christmas symbols, and the silver candlesticks had shades of red. The decorations in the ball room included garlands of green hung with balls and tiny red shaded electric lights. Around the arches of the alcoves on each side of the ball room was a framework of smilax and poinsettia with silver tinsel adding sparkle to it. In the corners of the ball room palms were banked and a large Christmas tree completed the effect.

The orchestra rendered a bright musical program during supper and afterwards dancing was enjoyed.

Mrs. Murphy was handsomely gowned in pink silk, trimmed in crystal. Miss Elliott assisted her to receive, wore white satin embroidered in silver.

Mrs. James McKelvin, who was being cordially welcomed home, after a visit to New York, wore a cream-colored gown with a blue chignon. Mrs. Charles A. Conklin wore a white satin gown, embroidered in silver.

Mrs. Asa Candler wore a black satin gown with a touch of silver about the corsage. Mrs. George Adair wore a draped gown of pink satin. Mrs. John Otley wore a cream-colored gown with tulle of blue chiffon, embroidered in crystal. Mrs. Clark Howell wore an elegant toilette of Pointe de Venise lace over white satin. Mrs. Harry

Miss Carroll wore a white lace gown. Miss Ada Alexander wore a pale blue satin gown and trimmed in crystal. Mrs. Edward H. Barnes wore an ice-blue satin gown, the corsage embroidered in silver. Mrs. F. L. Payson wore white satin broadened in gold flowers and trimmed in gold. Mrs. Henry Bankhead wore a pale blue satin gown embroidered in silver. Mrs. Henry Barnes wore white broadened satin. Mrs. Henry Jackson wore pale blue satin. Mrs. Ulic Atkinson wore flame-colored satin, embroidered. Miss M. A. Phelan wore a cloth of gold lisse gown. Mrs. Harry Atkinson wore a blue gown in cloth of gold, broadened in roses. Mrs. L. H. Beck wore a net gown embroidered in gold over gold-colored satin. Mrs. William H. Beck wore a becoming toilette in black satin.

Mrs. W. S. Eikin wore a white ivory satin gown embroidered and trimmed in crystal. Mrs. James D. Robinson wore a beautiful in white satin trimmed in crystal and pearls. Mrs. Frank S. Ellis wore a black satin gown, the corsage with garniture of silver and crystals. Miss Mable Drake wore a white tulle gown embroidered. Mrs. George Dexter wore a white satin gown, the corsage embroidered in silver and trimmed in rose point lace. Mrs. Charles A. Simon wore a gold-colored broadened satin with coral embroidery of gold. Mrs. John Kiser wore a ball gown of black tulle embroidered in jet sequins. Mrs. Wilmer Moore wore a pale blue satin gown, the corsage embroidered in gold. Mrs. J. G. Oglesby wore a white broadened crepe gown.

Among the delightful dinners of the week was that of Miss Thyra B. Whitehead entertained Tuesday evening in honor of Mr. J. W. Crut, of Terre Haute, Ind.

The table was beautiful in decoration of red and white, the centerpiece in poinsettia. Around this were silver candlesticks with red shades under silver filigree, and a finishing touch was given in small vases of meadow roses and valley lilies. Mrs. Whitehead was handsomely gowned in green and silver satin. Mrs. Lamar Moore wore pink chiffon cloth; Mrs. Ellis wore yellow satin trimmed in lace. Miss English wore white satin and Miss Carroll a black tulle gown.

Mrs. Albert Thornton entertained at a brilliant dinner party Thursday evening, her guests including General and Mrs. Miller, Judge and Mrs. Lamar, and Mrs. Frank Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Howell, and Mrs. Austell Thornton. Mrs. Whitehead, Miss Thornton, Mr. James Alexander and Mr. Joseph Brown Connolly.

The table decorations were charming in their combination of meadow roses and valley lilies. Tiny stockings contained souvenirs of the occasion for each guest, and all the necessary decorations bespoke the Christmas symbols.

Among the larger affairs given by the school girl set was the dance given by Miss McKenize at the Driving Club Thursday night. The club was beautifully decorated, an elegant supper served and it would be difficult to find anywhere an assemblage of as many pretty girls. Miss McKenize was lovely in a pink satin gown draped in chiffon and trimmed in pink rosebuds. Miss Passie Otley was one of the beauties of the occasion and wore a dancing gown of emerald green satin shaded into sea foam. It was draped effect and the corsage was trimmed in point lace net and crystal and gold. Miss Anne Orme wore a white satin gown trimmed in crystals. Miss Nancy Prince wore a red chiffon gown. Miss Marjorie Brown wore a pink embroidered net gown. Miss Mary Traylor were pink satin. Miss Harriet Calhoun wore a green chiffon cloth.

She is well known in Atlanta, where her typical southern beauty and charm of manner have made her many friends.

The buffet luncheon at which Miss Katherine Ellis entertained Wednesday was a beautiful affair and the reception given by Mrs. Richardson and Miss Richmond Thursday evening was one of the handsomest of the season, with two hundred guests in attendance. Miss Richardson is one of the loveliest members of the young society set and wore a becoming toilette in pale blue satin. Mrs. Ralph Hayden has been one of the most popular visitors of the holidays and she wore most becomingly Wednesday evening a cloth of silver gown draped with red chiffon.

Of the coming events none is being anticipated with more pleasure than the masque ball at which the members of the Nine O'clock German Club will entertain the evening of the 28th. There will be elaborate decorations, an elegant supper will be served at 11 o'clock and a handsome prize will be presented the young lady wearing the most unique costume.

Ware-Shaw.

Mrs. Whitehead, Miss Thornton, Mr. James Alexander and Mr. Joseph Brown Connolly.

Lowe, of McDonough, was lovely in white messaline, trimmed in gold and silver passementerie. Miss Ruth Kitchings, of Atlanta, and Miss Marie Wright, of Greensboro, wore gowns of blue messaline, trimmed in silver spangle net and crystal fringe.

Miss Adelaide Rollins, of Kingston, and Miss Eva Key Bailey, of Jackson, were very pretty in their gowns of pink messaline, trimmed in silver net and crystal fringe. The bride's maids all carried pink and white carnations, with pink tulle. The little flower girls, Misses Lucile Barrett and Elsie Stephens, were lovely in their lingerie dresses, with pink and blue ribbons, carrying their little baskets and strewing the rose leaves before the bride.

There was a reception at the home of the bride's parents, 119 Washington street, after the ceremony. The house was gorgeously decorated, the parlors being radiant in the Christmas colors, red and green. The dining room was beautiful in pink and white. The bride's table was festooned in pink and white chains, having a bouquet of pink and white carnations in the center, the bride's cake on one end. The supper was served buffet style, having a delicious salad course. The cakes were white, with pink monograms. The cream was pink hearts, with white Cupids. The bride's mother was dressed in gray messaline, trimmed in cut steel. The receiving party was Mrs. A. J. O'Halloran, of Selma, Ala., sister of Mrs. Ware. Her dress was hand-embroidered chiffon, with lace trimmings.

Mrs. J. L. Porter was in black crepe de chine, with jet trimming. Mrs. J. W. Kinard had on a tan crepe silk, trimmed in lace. Miss Annie Johnson, of West Point, was dressed in blue messaline, with lace bands. Miss Pearl Mathews, of Athens, wore an old rose chiffon, with lace trimmings. Miss Mattie Lumpkin's dress was green messaline, with green and silver passementerie. Mrs. Effie Dewberry served punch, and was gorgeous in a black lace dress, with jet trimmings. The happy couple left right after the reception for Florida.

Floyd-Jackson.
A marriage that is of interest to the many friends of the young couple throughout the state will be that of Miss Nellie Floyd to Mr. Paul Erskine Jackson, which will occur on the afternoon of the fifth of January at Fairburn, Ga.

Miss Floyd is the second daughter of Mrs. W. W. Floyd, of Fairburn. She is a beautiful blond of unusual personal charms, who has endeared herself to a large circle of friends in Atlanta as well as her home town.

Mr. Jackson is a young man of sterling business qualities and prominent social standing. He is a native of Athens, Ga., where he has for the last several years been identified with the cotton business.

Richardson-Hester.
Mrs. Frank Henry Richardson has announced the engagement of her daughter, Lella, to Mr. John Hutchinson Hester, lieutenant U. S. A., the marriage to take place in April at All Saints' church.

Miss Richardson is a charming young woman, a bright member of the social life in College Park, and with a large acquaintance in Atlanta. She is a daughter of the late Mr. Henry Richardson, one of the most distinguished of southern newspaper men, and his many friends will be interested in her approaching marriage.

Mr. Hester, originally from Alabama, is a graduate of the State University and of West Point, and is now a popular officer of the Seventeenth Infantry at Fort McPherson.

Cate-Horne.
Miss Bertha E. Cate and Mr. Clarence H. Horne were united in marriage yesterday morning at the residence of the bride's parents, 77 Millidge avenue. Dr. John E. White officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Cate and a young lady of many personal charms.

Mr. Horne resided at Fort Worth, Texas, where he and his bride will make their home.

Berry-Trevaski.
The marriage is announced of Mrs. Ella Ragdale Berry and Mr. William John Trevaski, which took place in St. Louis Wednesday, December 22, 1909.

Pretty Toilets.
A number of pretty gowns furnished for the holidays express all the grace and style of the mid-winter season. One particularly smart gown for a handsome matron, who will wear it in the national capital, is of olive reps silk, the skirt draped and the corsage embroidered in self tones and dull silver. The Dutch neck is finished by a little ruffle of English thread lace. For the same stylish woman an evening coat was made of green chiffon velvet, made long, and with straight lines, and finished with collar and cuffs of white fox.

A smart calling gown is of taupe gray cloth, the corsage embroidered in lands, applied on chiffon the same color. The suit is completed by a coat of the cloth, tailor made, and smartly embroidered.

A debutante's evening gown of pink charmeuse satin was draped and trimmed in a narrow crystal fringe, which reflected the pink color of the gown. An elegant toilet in black crepe de chine was exquisitely embroidered in chenille, and finished with a yoke and lower sleeves of thread lace.

Christmas Tree.
The third of the series of suppers given by the ladies of the Unitarian congregation will be combined with the Sunday school Christmas tree festivities on Tuesday, December 28, at the church, corner Spring and Cain streets.

At six o'clock promptly Mrs. F. E. Brownell and her assistants will serve a fine supper. All the children connected with the Sunday school and congregation are expected to be present at the supper and some of them will help in the exercises of the evening under the direction of the Sunday school superintendent, Mr. Hamilton Douglas, and the teachers. All the congregation, with their friends, are invited to the supper and to the Christmas tree festival for the children.

Heart-Dice Party.
Mrs. W. A. Holliday will entertain at her home on East Georgia avenue next Thursday afternoon at a pretty Christmas party. Heart-dice will be played. The decorations and refreshments will be suggestive of the yuletide season. About twenty-five married friends have been invited.

Miss LeVin entertains.
Miss Gladys LeVin was the charming young hostess at an eggnog party yesterday, her guests invited from 6 until 7 o'clock in the afternoon, and finding awaiting them a most cordial welcome the company enjoyed the hospitality and the spirit of all, expressing the Christmas joy.

There were a hundred guests entertained, these including a large contingent of the young married set in society and a few of Miss LeVin's young married friends.

Receiving with her was her mother, and assisting in entertaining were Misses Martha and Bessie Woodward, Lottie Peck Wylie, Edith Russell, Sallie Cobb Johnson and Mildred Sprattling and Mrs. W. W. Goldsmith.

Mrs. LeVin was handsomely gowned in yellow chiffon broadcloth. Miss LeVin was charming in an embroidered crepe de chine gown in midnight blue color, the corsage brightened by a touch of gold.

The entire house was artistically decorated in the Christmas foliage wreaths and crimson and white cut flowers. Potter poinsettias and narcissi were used in combination with palms, and on the mantels ferns were banked, through which showed clusters of vivid-hued carnations.

In the dining room there were garlands of smilax drawn from the chandeliers to the corners of the room, forming a canopy of green over the table. Bows of red satin ribbon draped the garlands in the windows and from the corners of the room to the center of which were Christmas bells.

The table had as a centerpiece a plateau of meteor roses, sprayed with narcissi. The candlesticks had red shades, under silver filigree, and silver baskets held red and green Bonbons. The ices carried out that color and on all sides there was evident in the decoration the Christmas color scheme. Music added to the merriment of the occasion.

Family Dinner.
Miss Jennie English entertained a family party yesterday at dinner in honor of her father, Capt. James W. English, her guests including Mr. and Mrs. James D. Robinson and their children, Emily, Jennie and James D. Robinson, Jr., Colonel James Warren English, Mr. and Mrs. Harry English, Mr. Edward English, Miss Alexander, Mr. J. W. Crut, of Terre Haute, Ind.

The table was exquisitely decorated in Killarney roses, a plateau of these forming the table centerpiece. The silver candlesticks had pink shades under silver, and the bonbons, cakes and ices were in pink.

Miss English was beautifully gowned in gray chiffon cloth embroidered in silver.

Miss Clarke's Reception.
Miss Rollie Clarke entertained at noon yesterday at her home on Peach tree street, and several hundred guests came to enjoy the Christmas hospitality.

Miss Clarke's annual "at homes" on Christmas day have come to be an expected and delightful part of each year's holiday gaiety, and yesterday her guest of honor was Miss May Atkinson.

Assisting in entertainment were a pretty group of debutantes—Misses Claire Ridway, Almes Hunnicutt, Nellie Kiser Stewart, Cobble Vaughn, Frances Nunnally, Lillie Logan and Sarah Bell—and the callers included both the married and unmarried sets.

shining with tinsel and toys, candles burned in silver canisters, silver dishes were filled with waffles, cakes and candies, and eggnog were served.

Morning At Home.
Dr. and Mrs. Floyd McRae formally at home yesterday at 11 o'clock, and sixty-seven enjoyed their hospitality.

The house was handsomely decorated with the Christmas foliage, and in the dining room delicious refreshments were served. The room was decorated with red and white, and the table was a silver centerpiece. The silver candlesticks had pink shades under silver, and the bonbons, cakes and ices were in pink.

Misses G.
Miss Nina Gentry entertained her friends at the occasion of the presentation of the house. The house was decorated with red and white, and the table was a silver centerpiece. The silver candlesticks had pink shades under silver, and the bonbons, cakes and ices were in pink.

Assisting in entertainment were a pretty group of debutantes—Misses Claire Ridway, Almes Hunnicutt, Nellie Kiser Stewart, Cobble Vaughn, Frances Nunnally, Lillie Logan and Sarah Bell—and the callers included both the married and unmarried sets.

ATWATER-FARRIS.

Thomaston, Ga., December 25.---(Special.)---The wedding of Miss Kathryn Atwater and Mr. Frederic Farris took place last Thursday at 6 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, Capt. and Mrs. J. W. Atwater. The bride's gown was an exquisite creation of bride's satin, fashioned with a yoke and panel of point lace, her face having pearls inset. With this was worn the wedding veil of white tulle, caught with a coronet of orange blossoms. The bouquet was of bride's roses showered with valley lilies. The going-away gown was elegantly tailored suit of brown. A brown chiffon waist, a beaver hat of the same shade with no other trimmings other than a golden rose, a set of mink furs and a corsage bouquet of Parma violets, completed the lovely costume. Mr. Farris and his bride left at 7 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Gray and children, of Locust Grove, and Mr. George Smith, of Atlanta.

SOCIETY

For the Mill Children Atlanta Talent Will Sing.

There will be a concert in Cable hall Monday evening, December 27, at 8:15 o'clock, for the benefit of the bath and library settlement work among the little children of the Atlanta Woolen Mills, under the auspices of the Chi Omega Sorority by the following artists:

Mr. Dave Silverman, violinist.
Miss Janie Brown Cofer, reader.
Miss Daisy Neal, soprano.
Miss Cynthia Neal, tenor.
Miss Cynthia Neal, contralto.
Miss Annie Laurie Langford, accompanist.

A delightful evening's entertainment is insured. Mr. Silverman, always a drawing card when on any program, is surely a real genius with the violin. Mr. Cofer, the popular tenor at the First Baptist church, has already sung his way into Atlanta's heart. Miss Cofer, also, is fast enshrining herself in our hearts by her splendid work on various occasions recently, notably Mr. Oscar Selig's concert and the concert at the Baptist Tabernacle some weeks ago. The Misses Neal, two young but very attractive and gifted singers, form, with Miss Cofer, a concert company which has been giving recitals in the Carolinas and Georgia with much success this fall. They are fast gaining an enviable reputation as pleasing entertainers. Miss Annie Laurie Langford is the soprano at the West End Baptist church. But as is evidenced by her splendid work as an accompanist, her wonderfully sweet voice is not her only gift. Miss Langford's is a familiar figure in the Atlanta musical world and no one does greater good with her talent or gives more genuine pleasure. The following program will be rendered:

Violin and piano ensemble: Sonata, George Frederik Handel; adagio; allegretto moderato—Mr. Silverman and Miss Langford.
Monologue, "At the Box Office," Elsie Livermore, Miss Cofer.
"Berceuse," from Josephine, Benjamin Goddard, Miss Daisy Neal, with violin obligato.
"With the Stream," Willoughby, Misses Daisy and Cynthia Neal.
"The Soul of the Violin," Miss Merrill, Miss Cofer.
Selected, Miss Cynthia Neal, Mr. Cofer.
Violin and piano, (a) "Un Garçon Tance" (Lullaby), S. E. Goldstein; (b) "Zingaretschka" (Hungarian), Gustave, Ellerton; Mr. Silverman; Miss Langford at the piano.

The young ladies of the Chi Omega Sorority have conducted a library at the Woolen Mills for two years and have done a beautiful work. The library is opened twice each week, books distributed to those who can read with a story hour for the little ones. They are planning to reopen their library, enlarged and improved, early in January, and they hope also to conduct the baths which are in the same building with the library, but which have never been successful because of the lack of sufficient funds to install the hot water and properly conduct the baths. Mrs. Hugh T. Inman is patroness of this work.

Tickets for the concert will be on sale Monday by young ladies of the Sorority, at Brown & Allen's and Phillips & Crew's and at Cable hall Monday evening.

To Miss Clements.

Miss Mary Pope McCall will entertain the 1909 Bridge Club Wednesday afternoon, in compliment to Miss Hattie Clements, of Buena Vista, Ga., who arrives Monday to be her guest.

Holiday Rush Over

This Week Will Be a Good Time for Leisurely Choosing of Fine Bargains

During all the activity of the past weeks there has been much quiet, steady preparation for after-Christmas offerings of the more staple merchandise. There will be many special sales during the next few days and weeks that will appeal to buyers who are well-posted on values and are quick to recognize bargains.

Your minds are preoccupied today and we therefore defer the details of the offerings that are to come, only reminding you that you should not miss the important announcements which our newspaper advertising will include in the days just coming.

This week will be a good time for shopping. The strain of the doubly busiest days of the year is over. Everybody has had a sleep and a holiday, and we are all cheerier and readier to begin anew.

You may shop at your ease; step to almost any counter and not be jostled. Better chance to move about and look at the goods.

And there will be many chances for bargain-buying; you can glean to your gain where a great harvest has been gathered. The surge and sweep of the Christmas throngs could not but do dust-damage and make breakages somewhere; and the goods thus hurt in the crowd will be closed out at almost-nothing prices.

More: In this week's clean-up we will reach into every nook and corner of the store and pull out the broken assortments and remnants in every department; ends of Dress Stuffs and Silks, of Linens and Wash Goods, odd lots of Suits and Coats.

The unpretentious, everyday goods which have been crowded into the background during the holiday rush will come into their own again; things that you will be glad to find within your easy reach.

Look about and look about; every counter is full of promise.

WOMAN CARRIER HURT.

Miss Hicks, of South Carolina, Struck by Train.

Spartanburg, S. C., December 25.—Miss Myra Hicks, the only woman mail carrier in South Carolina, and one of the best of her kind in the South, was struck by a train while en route to work this morning.

She was thrown from her horse and carried some 200 yards. She is now in the hospital, and her condition is serious.

She was employed by the Southern Railway Company, and had been carrying mail for several years.

Her husband, Mr. Hicks, is a well-known farmer in the community, and she was highly respected for her courage and endurance.

MISS BONNIE ROWE MILLER, OF CHIPLEY, Whose Engagement to Mr. James Paul Williams, of Hamilton, is Announced, the Marriage to Occur at the Methodist Church at Chipley on Wednesday, February 23.

To Miss McDaniel.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Glover entertained thirty guests delightfully yesterday morning from 11 until 1 o'clock. The house was elaborately decorated, a frieze of mistletoe and cedar in all the rooms making a pretty effect, and palms, holly and poinsettias were used with taste. The portieres leading out of the room of poinsettias and in the dining room, the punch bowl was set in the center of a mound of ferns, starred with poinsettias.

A feature of the occasion was a Christmas tree laden with tinsel and with favors for all the guests. It was set out on an inclosed veranda, which was made into a garden of palms and bamboo. The portieres leading out upon the veranda were of bamboo and red bells.

Mrs. Glover was becomingly gowned in blue chiffon broadcloth, and her sister, Miss Jessie McDaniel, of Dalton, who was the guest of honor, wore wistaria cloth and her corsage bouquet was of violets and orchids.

Assisting in entertainment, Mrs. Estelle Garrett Baker was gowned in blue cloth, embroidered, and Mrs. Louise Spalding Foster wore a black velvet gown.

To Yale Glee Club.

Mr. Willis Eugene Ragan and Mr. James Jackson Ragan have issued invitations for a reception to the Yale Glee Club on Friday afternoon, December 31, from 4 until 6 o'clock, 574 Peachtree street.

To Miss Brown.

Mrs. Don A. Pardee entertained informally at supper last night in compliment to Miss Marjorie Brown.

The Koenen Concert.

A great artist was presented for the first time to an Atlanta audience last Thursday night at the Grand under the direction of the Atlanta Musical Association.

It was Tilly Koenen, who won bravos from her audience and thorough appreciation of her high art. It was her versatility pleased all those who came for enjoyment and those who came to learn. To this last class, they could but marvel at her free, open throat, head resonance, perfect enunciation, original interpretation and her responsive nature needed stimulus, and not until her audience was conquered did she show her great dramatic ability and intense temperament yet the poetic side was always evident.

It was "Sunbeams" that first won a recall. Miss Koenen was encored many times, receiving several floral offerings, and was obliged to repeat two of her numbers.

Her program contained works by Handel, Strauss, Brahms and others, and although Miss Koenen had been heralded as one of the greatest contraltos of the day, she fully proved the truth of her advance press notices.

The next concert in the series of excellent ones, being put in the course given by the Atlanta Musical Association at the Grand this season, will be on January 9th, by the Atlanta Philharmonic Orchestra, with Edward Werner, tenor, as soloist.

Albert Spalding in Russia.

The admirers in Atlanta of Albert Spalding, the young violinist who was one of the stars in the musical festival, will be interested in the news contained in the following cable:

A cablegram was received in New York city yesterday announcing the engagement of Albert Spalding, the American violinist, for the Russian Christmas musical season. This is a fitting culmination for Mr. Spalding's triumphant tour through France, and is very encouraging to the young man.

Diamonds

A pure white diamond is a good investment for you. It is something which will retain its value, and at any time may be converted into cash.

The Crankshaw collection of diamonds is a worthy one, and you cannot afford to invest without looking at it.

Charles W. Crankshaw

Century Building 16 Whitehall

His European season opened in a very successful concert organized at Havre, November 14, by the Association Musicale de Paris. On this occasion he chose a purely classical program and scored a magnificent artistic triumph. Already his receptions abroad have been phenomenal and the critics of the Old World accord him a place among the best living masters of the violin.

The Russian season will consist of a series of concerts, and coming as it does about two weeks after the Christmas season in other countries, it is an engagement sought by all artists. Mr. Spalding will make his debut in Warsaw on December 29, and will tour the continent during the entire winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard at Home.
Mr. and Mrs. George Howard entertained at an informal eggnog party yesterday morning at 11:30.

Eggnog Party.
Mr. and Mrs. Rawson Collier entertained a few friends at a delightful eggnog party Friday night.

Evening Party.
Mrs. Louise Spalding Foster will entertain informally on the evening of New Year's day.

Ten to Miss Meriwether.

In honor of Miss Anna Meriwether, the Misses Rosalee and Bessie Eubanks entertained at tea Thursday afternoon, their guests invited at 5 o'clock.

Misses Elma Ray and Sadie Andrews presided at the punch bowl, and Miss Beatrice Nelms and Miss Annie Cobb Andrews at the tea table. Assisting in the entertainment of the guests were Mrs. R. D. Eubanks, Mrs. Moreland Zellars, Mrs. W. M. Matthews, Mrs. Walter Dennis, Mrs. Emmett Collier, Mrs. J. A. Carlyle, Miss Mollie Randall, Miss Jessie Bagwell, and Miss Callie Martin.

The house was most artistically decorated throughout with woodland mistle, holly and mistletoe, and potted plants showing red blossoms. The mistle framed the windows and doorways, from the arches of which hung Christmas bells. Wreaths and sprays of mistletoe added further to the effect, which was carried out in all the rooms.

In the dining room, where eggnog and delicious refreshments were served, there were poinsettia blossoms used as a decoration. In the center of the table was a cut glass vase filled with these, and around it the silver candlesticks had their lights softened by red shades.

The bonbons were frozen in red, and the ice cream was frozen in a design of Christmas bells.

Miss Meriwether wore a becoming toilet of blue satin embroidered in silver, and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Miss Bessie Eubanks wore lavender messaline silk, and a corsage bouquet of violets, and Miss Rosalee Eubanks wore a pink chiffon gown embroidered in silver. She carried a bouquet of white hyacinths.

Christmas Party.
Mrs. Dorsey E. Moorefield will entertain twelve little boys at luncheon on the 27th, the occasion to be in honor of her young son, Master Allen Moorefield, whose tenth birthday it will be.

After the luncheon the young folks will be given a matinee party at the Orpheum. The guests will be Leonard Lowe, Walter Wilkes, Hugh Goldsmith, Jr., Robert J. Scott, Earle Metz, Caldwell Holiday, Richard Bostain, Georgia Schoen, Wimberly Moorefield, William Merritt, Harry Ferguson, Ernest Moorefield and George Simpson.

Miss Harrison Entertains.
A very enjoyable affair of the week was the Christmas entertainment given by Miss Fannie Harrison, of Church street, East Point, to the members of her Sunday school class on Christmas Eve night. The apartments in which the guests were entertained were tastefully decorated in the colors of the season. Music and games were enjoyed for a while, then each had their fortunes told.

A very pleasing feature of the evening was "going to the postoffice," where a postmaster, in his genial way, handed out bright Christmas cards at the close of the evening cake and hot chocolate were served.

A Bazar.
The Ladies' Hebrew Charity Society and the Montefiore Relief Society will hold at the Auditorium-Armory a bazaar for four nights, beginning Monday, January 3, 1910.

Miss Meyer Entertains.
Miss Lottie Meyer has issued invitations to a reception Monday, December 27. About 75 young ladies are invited. She will be assisted by her mother, Mrs. William H. Meyer; Mrs. Lulu Meyer Fisher; Miss Sara Clayton of Birmingham, Ala.; and Miss Dorothy and Blanche Foster.

CHRISTMAS IN WASHINGTON MARKED BY UNIQUE FEATURES

By Grace Porter Hopkins.

Washington, December 25.—(Special.) Christmas is celebrated in Washington as in no other city in the United States. Its features are, indeed, a combination of international as well as national ways of observing the birthday of the Son of Righteousness, with the representatives of every country with which this government has diplomatic relations, as participants. Not all of the latter, however, join in the song "Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace, good will to men," for there are still pagans among them whose midwinter festival is rather a "Feast of the Sun" to commemorate the day in which the sun begins his return trip, bringing sunshine to all the world. But even these representatives of a people to whom Christ is unknown, or known only to be condemned as a prophet of an alien creed, save by the educated, who revere him as do all students, as one of the world's greatest philosophers, philanthropists and teachers, have adopted Santa Claus as the patron saint of their children while in America.

At the Chinese legation, where from time to time has been felt the influence of the English wife of an attaché, the Christmas tree of the Aryan race has been added to the season's jollity and on the night before Christmas, a string of stockings depend from the mantelpiece in the big drawing room, "in hopes that St. Nicholas soon will be there."

In this legation home, too, the Anglo-American holiday dinner was a recognized institution of the day, until the second appearance of Minister Wu Ting Fang, who, being a strict vegetarian, substituted a "nut-turkey" for the real thing. His successor, Minister Chang Yin Tang, who arrived with his family on Monday, is quite American in his tastes and is so familiar with our customs through a previous official residence here, that Christmas is expected to be the "best ever" at the legation of the Celestial Empire.

Besides his own two daughters, the new minister's family circle includes the daughters of Tong Shao Yi, who, as special Chinese envoy, visited Washington last year. Though they speak English unusually well, these young women will continue their studies after the holidays and not take part in social affairs until another season.

Kiazim Bey, of Turkey, is the only diplomat accredited to Washington with the rank of ambassador, to whose people the religious observance of the gift-season is not of paramount importance. The dean of the foreign corps and Baroness Major des Planches, Italy, go early to mass and are sure to have as fellow worshippers at St. Andrew's Roman Catholic church, the Argentinian Ambassador and Baroness de Melmueller, whose celebration for daughter, was, as usual, a striking event of Christmas Eve; the Ambassador and Madame Jus- the latter nee Miss Richards, son, who, without children of her own, lavish their Christmas gifts on the little ones of the embassy; the French pair in the city; the Ambassador and Madame Jus- who, following the custom of their country from Portugal centuries ago, have in "Drottio of the Nativity," illustrating in miniature the birth of the Savior, the family gifts are arranged on the more familiar of Washington. Following the custom of his predecessors, Dr. Ritter is having a monster Christmas tree decorated with...

the real celebration of Christmas invariably begins on the 24th of December.

The British embassy officials appear on mass at the morning service in St. John's Episcopal church, while later, in their homes many fine old English customs are observed. Dinner at the embassy in the evening for members of the ambassador's entire official family, was, as usual, a feature of the Yuletide. It was saddened, however, this year, by the approaching retirement of Mr. and Mrs. Bryce as chateaux of King Edward's official residence in Washington, a position they have dignified for three years, and leave with real regret.

The group entertained by them on Christmas day included their house guests, Mrs. Annin Bryce and Miss Marjorie Bryce, sister-in-law and niece of the ambassador, who are spending the winter here; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Fisher, also of London, and kinsmen of the embassy secretary and Mrs. George Young; and Hon. Rachel Shultsworth, sister of the military attaché of the embassy, and Mrs. James. Adding to the "homeyness" of the scene was the Yule log, which burned brightly in the great open fireplace in the dining room and around which, after dinner, the guests assembled to sing their Christmas carols just as they would in "Merrie England," across the water.

In Austria the children look for St. Nicholas to come on the night of December 6, when he is expected to leave at every house presents for the good children and switches for the bad. The young daughter of the ambassador from Austro-Hungary did not receive her presents on the day on which gifts are distributed in her own country, but she did get ahead of most of her playmates here, for her mammoth tree was amid the greatest gaiety, and witnessed by a brilliant company to whom her distinguished father played Santa Claus.

Of all the diplomatic Christmas festivities, that which most nearly approaches the American reception of the way the day should be observed, is the celebration "Weltnachtsfest" at the Imperial German embassy, presided over by Ambassador and Countess Von Bernstorff, and as heartily enjoyed by Countess Alexandra Louise, her daughter, as would be the case were she in the "Fatherland" instead of the new world. In Germany the children have explicit faith in Santa Claus, and the children of the Kaiser's representatives here in the nation's capital are not permitted to forget the story of how "Christkindchen" goes into every German home and leaves a loaded tree in token of his love.

At the Russian embassy there will be two Christmases, one celebrated this week and the other on January 6. The latter will be the real celebration, however, owing to the use of the Russian calendar. The belated Christmas will not lack in enthusiastic observance if the young daughter of the ambassador, Baroness Elizabeth, has anything to say about it. Indeed, it is expected that she will entertain a company of young friends on that date and introduce some of her country's unique holiday customs.

For the first time the Swiss legation has in it a small boy, the son of the new Minister and Madame Ritter, to share with the Swiss colony the joy of a real Swiss Christmas in the heart of Washington. Following the custom of his predecessors, Dr. Ritter is having a monster Christmas tree decorated with...

REHEARSALS FOR THE NEXT PLAY

Rehearsals have begun for the next production to be made by the Players' Club, under the direction of Mr. Edward Warren, and before long the cast will be announced. It will contain the names of many of the very talented members of the organization, ladies and gentlemen carefully selected as being eminently suited to the roles they are to portray, and in addition a surprise will be in store for those who believe that new faces constitute a strong factor in any dramatic club. The play selected—"Ruth-erford's Wife"—is one of David Belasco's earlier successes, and one of his greatest. It is a four-act comedy, the theme of which is the happy blendings of comedy and pathos, with the comedy element standing out in every act, and being of a clean and wholesome character. We have, for instance, the part of the dashing widow of "Mrs. Belasco" with her two ardent suitors, Major Putnam and Silas Truman. The scenes in which these three take part are uproariously funny; then we have two light comedy juvenile roles—Kitty Ives and Jack Dexter. Mr. Belasco never wrote brighter or happier situations; for an "ingenuous" or a "light comedian," the love scenes between these two young people are humorous and full of laughter. The more dramatic situations are constantly relieved by the comedy lines.

The play is tersely written, quick in action, and the interest of the audience is never allowed to flag by the introduction of long or tedious scenes. The play is not long. It admits of short waits between the acts, and from the rise to the fall of the curtain holds the audience's attention purely American, depicting characters more or less familiar to any audience. It admits of pretty stage settings and charming gowns, both of which will be taken advantage of.

Mr. Warren has staged the play many times, and is familiar with its every requirement. The interesting lectures given before the Players' Club will be discontinued, and every spare moment will be devoted to rehearsals of the play. A great deal of interest is aroused by the first public appearance of Mr. Edward Warren and his talented wife, known professionally as Marguerite Hammond, at an entertainment to be given for a charity connected with All Saints' church.

The program selected is most interesting, and Mr. and Mrs. Warren will appear in Thersa Smith's one-act comedy, "My Uncle's Will," in which Mr. Warren enacted the same part at Daly's Theater, New York city. Special inducements were offered Mr. and Mrs. Warren to secure their services for this interesting occasion, which will take place at the charming home of Mrs. Milton Dargan on Ponce de Leon avenue.

Hounding a Candidate for Governor in Mexico. The January American Magazine contains another article in the series on "Barbarous Mexico." It is devoted chiefly to corroborative evidence in support of Mr. J. K. Turner's remarkable statements exposing the atrocities that are being practiced in Mexico with the connivance of the government. The article contains a letter written by a resident of Yucatan who states that the free ballot is a farce. "Come and see the independent candidate for governor pursued as a wild beast for daring to buck against the official candidate," says the writer of the letter, and in explanation of the condition to which this refers, the author of the article states:

"The people in Yucatan wanted to place in nomination a candidate in opposition to the present temporary occupant of the office, Aristegui. A delegation visited Diaz two months ago and asked to be allowed to nominate a man. After much urgency, the president would give no direct answer, but said: 'I think Aristegui has done pretty well and I see no reason for change.' In spite of the slender suggestion in these words, on returning home they made plans for nominating Dello Moreno Canton, a nephew of a former governor. General Canton, a great planter of independent means and temper, then the trouble began. An order was issued for the arrest of Carlos Menendez, editor of La Revista de Merida, the oldest paper in the state and an advocate of the nomination of Moreno Canton, but he escaped and remained hidden during the campaign. Finally the prospective candidate was pursued and compelled to run away from the state. Political clubs favoring him were broken up. Some of his principal adherents were compelled to leave the state. And at the time of the election, November 7, all opposition had been practically dispelled; for the strongest opposition workers were in jail or in temporary exile."

Senator A. O. Bacon, of Georgia, was a prominent guest at the first annual banquet of the Society of the Cincinnati given at the Army and Navy Club at the close of its annual convention. This society, one of the oldest and most exclusive patriotic orders in the United States, was founded in 1783 by American and French soldiers who served in the continental army. Membership is by male descent only. General Washington was its first president, and Colonel Robert, President of the United States Senator Bacon, General Nelson A. Miles, Admiral Dewey and Dr. William H. Wilmer, son of the late Bishop of Alabama, are present-day members.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Crawford, of Washington, are spending the holidays with relatives in Athens, Ga. They will also visit Atlanta before returning north.

JAMES' SANATORIUM TREATMENT POINTS THE WAY

ARE THESE YOUR FUTURE JAMES' TREATMENT INSURES A PROSPECTS? FUTURE LIKE THIS:

Friends dwindling
People stop speaking
Fewer invitations to drink Occupation uncertain Daughter working for a living Son on the street
Children improperly clad Wife sick from worry House rent due Grocery bills unpaid
Creditors impatient Swearing off Getting drunk again
Position lost
Crazed by drink

Do you realize that such conditions often lead to Defauling—Family Murders—Suicide?

Are you swearing off? Are you taking the pledge? Are you trying to start life anew? Have you drunk in "moderation" until you induce in an occasional spree, brace up with a drink next morning, and go to work and feel shaky next day for the want of another drink? If so, you are suffering from the reaction of over-stimulation. You have diseased nerves, your stomach, your liver, your heart and your kidneys are becoming deranged. In a short time you will feel "all out of sorts" again. You will become nervous and restless, take a drink and get drunk. When you get sober you will be torn up worse than before, nauseated, nervous and sick, can't sleep, can't eat, disheartened, melancholy. Your memory is getting bad, you are losing your old-time pride and self-respect, the spree will come closer together until they become almost continuous. Your ambition and your interest in your work are on the wane, you need whiskey, you are suffering for it, but you are resisting it with all your power of both mind and body. Alcohol has weakened the mind, shattered the nerves, crippled the will, power; alcohol with you is now a physical necessity. You take one more drink as a tonic; it fires your brain and you take more and more, get drunk, get sick, get sober, fight off the desire for a while and get drunk again. Now, you are deceiving yourself by resolutions that you will be physically unable to keep. You are diseased. Neither will-power nor resolutions will keep your system from crying out for alcoholic stimulants, or keep you from falling when nature can no longer stand without alcoholic stimulation. The James' Treatment repairs the damage done the system by the excessive use of alcoholic drug or tobacco poisons, and the last vestige of these poisons is eliminated from the system. It builds up and restores the nervous system to a normal condition. It gives the heart a full normal action, cleans the liver and kidneys and cleanses the inflamed condition produced by alcohol.

COX COLLEGE AND CONSERVATORY

ONE DOZEN GOOD REASONS FOR ATTENDING COX COLLEGE.

1. Steady growth in numbers.
2. Attractive buildings, with modern conveniences and equipment, recently renovated and beautifully decorated.
3. Thorough courses of instruction in literature, music, art and expression, higher standards of work and attainments than is customary for women in the South.
4. Graduates admitted to the great Northern universities on the college certificate.
5. Demand for graduates to fill teaching positions greater than the supply.
6. Unsurpassed health record. No serious illness in years.
7. High-toned moral and deep spiritual life of the student body. Strong religious influences and high ideals inculcated which are just the conditions sought by earnest and careful parents.
8. Easy access to the great lectures, concerts and high-grade entertainments that come to Atlanta.
9. Spacious and attractive grounds. Basketball, tennis, croquet, delightful walks, motoring, produce sparkling eyes and rosy cheeks—the embodiment of health and happiness.
10. An earnest school for earnest girls.
11. The homelike atmosphere. So noticeable is this that visitors comment upon it.
12. Cordial welcome always extended to interested friends and patrons. We refer with confidence and pride to all who have thus honored us.

Cox College has been full the past season. Now is the time to see about the new vacancies that may occur for the spring term.

NEW PIEDMONT CHAPTER REGENT WELL EQUIPPED FOR HER WORK

MRS. W. M. T. YEANDLE, Newly Elected of Piedmont Chapter.

Mrs. William H. Yeandle, the newly-elected regent of the Piedmont Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, is well and favorably known in all circles of the association, having previously, on two occasions, filled the office of regent, and served two successive terms as state corresponding secretary, delegate to national and state conventions, etc., so that she is well equipped for the position. Mrs. Yeandle comes from a long and distinguished ancestry, cavalier and Puritan, on both paternal and maternal sides. South Carolina and Massachusetts, the Puritan line dating back to the landing of the Mayflower.

INTEREST IS INCREASING IN MOVEMENT TO MARK GREAT M'INTOSH TRAIL

We note there is a movement on foot to locate and mark the great Natchez trace in the states of Mississippi and Alabama, and in this behalf the Hon. Robert Jones, of Mississippi, addressed the annual conference of the Daughters of the American Revolution for the state of Alabama at Tuscaloosa on the 1st instant, urging them to cooperate in this work. Let Georgia not be behind. We need to locate and mark with appropriate tablets the great McIntosh trail, running from Fort Hawkins (Macon) via Newnan to Oxford, Ala. and beyond. Fortunate are the counties through which this famous trail passes. It forever links them with the history and fate of a brave, though wild, tribe of men. First a mere path through impenetrable forest, blazed with the red man's tomahawk; next, a narrow, stumpy road over which rode traders and settlers on their way through the Creek nation to the French villages along the Mississippi; then a well-worked highway for the convenience of the white planter. It has endured more than a century and a half as laid out by the Indians with a directness of course that could hardly be improved upon by surveyor and compass. The McIntosh Reserve. Along this trail lies McIntosh Reserve, a tract of land in Coweta and Campbell counties, which was set apart for the benefit of the Indian chief, General William McIntosh, at the time the land was ceded to Georgia. The four corners of this historic tract should be durably marked with pillars of stone.

In the midst of this reserve, on the banks of the Chattahoochee, stood the home of the once popular leader of his tribe. It was a pretentious abode for that day, and travelers were often entertained for the night under its hospitable roof. It was here he was killed, his house plundered and burned and his life stock driven off shortly after midnight on May 1, 1825, by 170 of his own men, who believed him their enemy for having sold the lands of the tribe to the state of Georgia.

McIntosh was a friend of his people and a friend of Georgia. He saw the inevitable that his tribe must go west, and that it was better to go in peace, yet he was killed as traitor to his people. He fought with the Americans in the war of 1812; he fought with the Georgians in his first wars with other Indians; our state received a great benefit from his act, yet no stone is set up to show where he met his tragic death. How long shall this neglect continue?

geographical survey in rulings which make a more careful supervision of the coal mines mandatory. That the officials of the other coal mining states be induced to follow their example, is one practical application of conservation principles, which should appeal to all lovers of humanity.

An Object Lesson. An object lesson in conserving resources is to be found in Memorial Continental Hall, erected by the Daughters of the American Revolution. This society has been in existence less than twenty years and its annual dues are only two dollars (half of that being retained in the states in most cases), yet by economy and husbanding of resources, aided by generous contributions, it has erected a building, with an auditorium second to none in the city. At the recent meeting of the laymen's missionary convention, Mr. Gifford Pinchot, the chairman, alluded to the movement as the application of the conservation principles to the ethical and spiritual resources of the Christian brotherhood for the benefit of the millions outside the fold; and in introducing the president, said:

"It is my high honor to introduce a great layman, a strong advocate of material conservation, as well as moral and spiritual conservation, and the author of the best defense of missionaries that has ever been uttered."

Keynote to the Work. But the keynote of all women's work was struck by Mrs. Noyes at a recent luncheon given by the Chicago Chapter D. A. R. to the president general, Mrs. Matthew T. Scott. "Let statesmen save the forests and citizens save the streams."

And Poets pen immortal lines to crystallize their dreams; The Daughters' conservation is work most consecrate To keep alive the patriot fires and make the country great.

"This is our work, sisters; to train the youthful mind to the instruction of the children along these lines. Similar committees have been appointed in North Carolina and other states."

MANY DELEGATES ARE EXPECTED TO FIRST MEETING OF ANTI-TUBERCULOSIS ASSOCIATION.

To First Meeting of Anti-Tuberculosis Association.

The program of the meeting to be held in Atlanta, January 17-19, 1910, which ends this article, should be of interest to all.

In many associations and many charities all that can be seen for the members is the good which they may be able to do for others which, it must be admitted, is no small pleasure, still they are altruistic and they are nothing more.

Whereas an association of the nature announced in the name of the above mentioned, is equally as altruistic as many others, and it is something more, it is self-protective, and if such an expressive may be coined, family-protective.

No use to think or feel that because we or our children are in good health there is no need to worry. There is need to worry, and better than worry, to work to eradicate all germs of tuberculosis from every community.

Doubtless the association will receive the assistance and moral support of all the organizations in the state. The following program appears well arranged, and promulgation of its subjects should be of general benefit.

Program.

Papers, committee on organization, nomination of officers. Relation of the dairy to tuberculosis. Relation of meats to tuberculosis. Need of state inspection of cattle. Relation of the negro to spread tuberculosis.

How the negro best prevent tuberculosis. The school as a factor in developing tuberculosis. The function of the teacher and school boards in preventing tuberculosis.

Afternoon Session.

Report of committee on organization and election of officers. Need of vital statistics throughout the state. Need of county and city boards of health in vital relation with the state board of health.

Need of county and city sanitarians for advanced cases of tuberculosis. The functions and benefits of the state sanitarians for tuberculosis. Train, railroad stations, street cars and public buildings as factors introducing tuberculosis.

Tenement houses, hotels and factories as disseminators of tuberculosis. Evening Session. Public address on tuberculosis.

Mrs. Willist Honored.

Mrs. Huguette Willist has been invited to become a vice president of the association for the control of tuberculosis. The request has also been made that Mrs. Willist appoint two delegates-at-large for the state federations, and that she notify her clubs that each organization is invited to send two delegates to Atlanta to the convention of January 17 to 19.

The presence of these club delegates will not in any way bind them to membership in the association.

Request to Federate Clubs.

It is requested that the president of each federated club instruct her secretary to mail the state editor three copies of the club year book or programs. Address: MRS. J. LINDSAY JOHNSON, Rio Vista, Rome, Ga.

PIANO RECEIVED AT TALLULAH

The beautiful piano presented by Mr. George M. Siskels, of Atlanta, to the Tallulah Falls Industrial School, was received in time for the holidays. Installed in the great living room, where the Christmas festivities were held, it formed a delightful addition to the exercises. The friends of the school were greatly delighted with this generous gift and extend most hearty thanks to Mr. Siskels and also to the Southern Railway and to the branch road from Cornelia to Tallulah Falls, which carried this gift free of all charges. The Federation has reason to be very happy in the success which has from the first attended its efforts in the establishment of this school, and the beautiful Christmas spirit seems to have been especially present in the hearts of the many friends who have helped to make this such a happy time for the little children of this school.

Don't take any substitute; demand K K K Flour.

THE ROME WOMAN'S CLUB. The Rome Woman's Club is contemplating assisting the United Charities of that city in collecting funds to aid the district nurse with needy cases of tuberculosis or cases of illness among the poor.

Virginia D. A. R. state conference, Mrs. James C. Gipe, secretary of the joint committee on conservation, after alluding to the fact that the conservation idea is not new, as generally supposed, but was introduced as early as 1857, by George Washington, called upon the women to aid in seeing that the children of the country have a square deal, saying: "If the mothers in the homes and the teachers in the schools will instill in the minds of the children the principles of conservation, the ultimate success of the movement is at once assured."

Acting upon his suggestion, a committee was appointed to confer with the state board of education and Teachers' Association for the purpose of initiating a movement looking to the instruction of the children along these lines. Similar committees have been appointed in North Carolina and other states.

MRS. TIFT TO EQUIP WORKSHOP AT TALLULAH

The industrial work for the mountain boys in the Tallulah Falls school is not going forward because of lack of equipment. Young Mr. Tift, of Tifton, hearing of this report, which was made at the Elberton convention, determined that the mountain boys should have a chance, and so has asked the privileges of furnishing the workshop with necessary tools and other equipment.

More Good News.

Wednesday evening the Ponce de Leon Baptist Sunday school held its annual celebration. The program consisted of beautiful songs sung and acted out by the younger children, stereopticon pictures, presentation of presents to various teachers, by the classes, and reports of the money raised for charitable and philanthropic work.

This generous offer of Mr. Tift, a young financier of Tifton, is a beautiful example to the fortunate this Christmas. When the hearts of all are going out in love to friends and near ones, and in doing that has conferred a lasting benefit. Long will his name be remembered, and long will the good following this gift be felt.

Wednesday evening the Ponce de Leon Baptist Sunday school held its annual celebration. The program consisted of beautiful songs sung and acted out by the younger children, stereopticon pictures, presentation of presents to various teachers, by the classes, and reports of the money raised for charitable and philanthropic work.

Tallulah Falls Industrial school came in for its full share of contributions. Mr. W. L. Richardson and Mr. F. J. Cooleedge's classes all made gifts to Tallulah.

These were supplemented by a generous gift of $50 from the officers of the Sunday school. Certainly December 22 was a red-letter day for our mountain school. Up there under the shadow of our mountain pines, in the pretty new school house, our fifty-eight school children were enjoying their first great Christmas tree, and down here in the midst of this wonderful city God was working in the hearts of His people and causing them to think of those who need their help, and to give of their store in full measure.

This is the true spirit of Christmas, and heaven is smiling upon it. God bless the day, and God will bless the deed.

HAPPY CHRISTMAS SPENT BY SCHOOL CHILDREN

A letter received from Miss Campbell, of Tallulah Falls school, tells of the happy Christmas the bright little mountain boys and girls enjoyed through the generosity of some of Atlanta's merchants. So generous and so warm were they in giving that soliciting for the Christmas box was a pleasure. Aside from gifts of gloves, stockings, shirts, dresses, books and dolls, Mr. Hubert, of Kress Company, supplied the glitter and sparkle for the first Christmas tree that many of these children have seen. The Atlanta Woman's Club and Mrs. Lipcomb, who is mother of the school, desire to thank sincerely the following merchants who helped them in this "Georgia" cause:

Chamberlain-Johnson-DuBose Company, J. M. High Company, Davison-Paxon-Stokes Company, Parker-Chambers Hardware Company, George Mus Clothing Company, Thomas B. Lumpkin Company, Cole Book Company, Jacobs Pharmacy Company.

THE WATERS DISTRICT MODEL SCHOOL.

The Waters District Model School, in Floyd county, bears the name of a family well known in that section for its good sense and generosity to all progressive movements. A member of this family gave the land on which are erected the several buildings of the school.

At all times some one of the family have been interested in the educational work with the club women. Just the other day the family united to add one of the children, little Elizabeth Waters, obtain a beautiful auto piano for the school.

The Tribune Head, of Rome, offered a $500 piano as a premium, in a subscription contest. This little girl and her family obtained the largest number of subscriptions, earned the piano and presented it to the model school.

It is no more useful place for an auto piano than in a country school, where so often music is needed for marches and drills, and there is no one able to play for the children.

Report of Georgia Sorosis.

The Georgia Sorosis pioneer Woman's club of Elberton, and bearing the distinction of being the first of its kind in the state, extends hearty and cordial greetings to the federation, the formal addresses of welcome to which you have already listened have no doubt convinced you of the utmost sincerity of our welcome, and pledge to you not only a formal reception as a convention of distinguished women, but to assure each individual member of warmest and most cordial welcome. The work of Sorosis has never been spasmodic; established some twenty years ago, upon broad and enduring principles, the club has progressed in its work, while its purposes directed mainly to social and civic improvement, and the advancement of education, and there has never been a time when the club was not in active working order.

Under the wise leadership of the charter president, our lamented sister, S. A. Bowman, there was developed an unselfish devotion and loyalty which has remained until the present time. Among other things during the current year we note the following: The initiation fee has been raised from $3 to $5, and the membership changed from $5 to $10.

In receiving new members, preference is always given to the daughters of members; we require, however, that they shall be fitted by education and culture for the position.

A number of programs during the year have proven very interesting and instructive; the topics mainly discussed were forestry, literature, music, and civic government. Special attention is being given to education, and one of the most interesting programs of the year was a debate upon the question, "Resolved, That a compulsory attendance law is the only way to secure a better educated citizenry."

The affirmative side of the question was handsomely sustained, and a petition from the citizens of the county will go up to the legislature as a result.

We have had some beautiful musicals conducted by Mrs. L. P. Eberhardt, our chairman on music. One was devoted to the observance of Washington's birthday and another to the life and influence of Joel Chandler Harris; at the latter were a number of recitations and readings from the homes and the teachers in the schools will instill in the minds of the children the principles of conservation, the ultimate success of the movement is at once assured."

Christmas Goes; The New Year Comes

The melody of chiming Christmas bells is now a part of the music of the ages. Into the calendar of the centuries Christmas of 1909 has found its place with those other Christmases which have marked the years since the angels' songs awoke the sleeping shepherds, as they tended their flocks on the green hillsides of Judea.

Holly, mistletoe and splendid crimson poinsettia blossoms still decorate the homes of the rich, and those less fortunate, to whom the grind of daily toil supplies the urgent necessities of life, Christmas, above all other festivals, is essentially the festival of the home. It is the season beyond all others that awakens the tenderest sentiment in the hearts of men and women.

Across seas and continents come separated families, to gather around the home fireside, in sweet and intimate communion. Gifts from their silent way along the highways of the globe, carrying their messages of love from distant relations.

The coming of the Christ Child, far back in the centuries, inaugurated an era which has made the home life of Christian nations, the gauge of progress and prosperity. Wherever the spirit of the Babe of Bethlehem abides, at this holy season, whether in cottage or in palace, the radiance of the Star in the East rests like a benediction. From homes so blessed goes out the inspiration for better deeds and whither living, and makes the coming of the New Year glorious with hope and faith.

The joy and sweetness, the trials and sorrows of the year just coming to a close are numbered with things that are gone forever, but they shall bear their part in the great final reckoning when time shall be no more. The past is irrevocable. Neither smiles or tears can alter that ledger, upon the pages of which are writ the deeds done in the body.

But the advent of the New Year, abounding in promises of a future unknown and unreadable, brings the glorious opportunity for nobler achievement, and for the better fulfillment of the hopeful prophecies of earlier manhood and womanhood. It is peculiarly significant that the birth of the New Year follows so closely upon the advent of that Child, who brought to expectant humanity the realization of things foretold, when the world was very young.

While all mankind is softened and mellowed by the recurring anniversary which marks the coming of the Prince of Peace, the bounteous New Year crosses the threshold of Time, and greets the universe with brightness and good cheer. The melody of the angels' song, which engirdles the globe, mingles with the triumphant welcome that is accorded the advancing New Year. The holy and mistletoe will soon wither; the brilliant crimson blossoms of the poinsettia will droop and fade, the sweet chiming of Christmas bells has ceased, but the reign of the Christ Child is eternal.

Years may come, and years may go, but the kingdom of the Prince of Peace increases in glory and in power, as each twelfth month takes its place among those other months which form the centuries of the past. The New Year is even now upon the borderland of time, while yet the inspiring splendor of the Star in the East illumines the hearts and homes of mankind.

Christmas is gone, but the beautiful New Year stands just outside, and catches the glad acclaim of a happy, welcoming world.

CONSERVATION CURRENT EVENTS

This column is edited by conservative committee of National D. A. R. Mrs. Joseph M. Brown, Mrs. P. W. Godfrey and Mrs. John M. Graham are Georgia members.

With the promise of the president to recommend conservation laws in his message to congress—the assurance of the secretary of the interior that his annual report will show that he is in the vanguard of the conservation movement—and the knowledge that the secretary of agriculture and the heads of the various bureaus in his department are advocating and working for conservation, it would at first thought seem hardly necessary for any organization of women to take up the cause. But when we recall that within the last month over half a million dollars worth of property has been destroyed in preventable fires, and nearly four hundred lives have been lost in a preventable mining disaster, it is evident that there is still work left for every man, woman and child. For while the president and governors may recommend legislation, only congress and state legislatures can enact laws; and the thorough enforcement of any law depends in a great measure on the hearty, intelligent cooperation of the people. In Europe less than two men out of every thousand employed in coal mines lose their lives each year. In this country, five men in every thousand were killed, and in 1908 the death rate was 3.6. This decrease of the death rate was due, according to those who have investigated mining conditions, to the fact that the state inspectors of Alabama, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, have incorporated the recommendations of the

Cartoonist McCutcheon in Africa

He Will Tell in Word and Picture the Story of Big Game Hunting in Rooseveltland

HUNTERS of many kinds have gone to Africa. Some have been explorers, some have been churchmen, some soldiers, and some have been ex-presidents; but it was left for John T. McCutcheon of international note to be the first cartoonist to go there for that purpose, and he is now there for The Chicago Tribune and The Atlanta Constitution.

After having made game of so many people at home, this great cartoonist and writer of The Chicago Tribune is now making game of the fauna of Africa. He has exchanged the pen of the caricaturist for the Mannlicher and the cordite rifles of the professional sportsman. He has had remarkable success in East Africa, and the series of articles and pictures which The Constitution is to publish shortly will be of fascinating interest.

To his artistic talent Mr. McCutcheon, as is well known, adds the literary ability of his family. He writes, however, with no forced flourish, but contents himself with setting down in terse English a straightaway account of what really happened to him. He does not pretend that his experiences are unique, or that his emotions in shooting big game for the first time have not been felt by others before. Like everything else he does, this task of description is accomplished with modesty and success.

You Hunt With Him

The average hunter of big game in Africa or elsewhere who writes of his adventures almost invariably omits many details which stay-at-home readers want to know. They take it for granted that those who read their books are as intimate with the details of the chase as they are themselves, and as a result they use terms only known to the initiate, and forget to explain a host of matters which are as interesting as the description of their encounters with the game.

This mistake has been avoided by Mr. McCutcheon, who explains everything he bought in preparation and why he bought it; why he wore certain clothing; why the camp was pitched in such and such manner and place; why this food was tabooed and why that was eaten. When he goes stalking game, the reader stalks with him and feels the heat of the tropic sun, the scratches of the African thorns tearing through his clothes, the excitement of following the lion or the rhino across veldt and over miles of hill.

The very simplicity of Mr. McCutcheon's style is its chief charm. There is no striving for effect. It is plain, nervous English, almost photographic in its description of the country he traverses, of the profusion of game in that wonderful land, and of the tense delight of the chase. Written as it is, night after night, it has all the graphic charm for the reader that a personal letter might possess, and the delightful humor portrayed in the pictures he has made add wonderfully to the pleasure derived from the text.

Getting Ready for the Jungle

Mr. McCutcheon outfitted in London and he began his letter with a description of himself trying to look wise and talk intelligently about the different kinds of guns.

When the party arrived at Nairobi things began to mix. The place is a seething mass of cosmopolitan humanity, the outsider intent on hunting and the residents anxious, for a consideration, to help them to their desire. The country adjacent literally swarms with game of every description, and the stories the traveler hears increase in blood-curdling quality as he approaches the home of the lion, the elephant, and the rhino. The lion, he is told, approach so near the town that they frequently chase the zebra or hartebeest into the streets.

The party after a brief wait, during which some of the members had experience in captive balloons, secures its gunbearers, its cooks, porters and all the camping necessities and starts on its way for the hunting grounds. No detail of camp life is omitted by Mr. McCutcheon in his letters, and you cannot but partake of the excitement and the impatient joy of the start for the scene of action. Each hunter has to have a government license. He can only shoot a stipulated number of certain animals; he must provide food, bedding and other accommodations for each native he takes with him, and obey other necessary regulations of the law.

Tale of the First Lion

At last the party reaches the point for which it aimed, and after a day or two of reconnoitering the members, each attended by gunbearers, start out on individual hunts for lions and rhinoceros—but that's a story McCutcheon will himself tell The Constitution readers.

Fact Different From Fancy

McCutcheon says he had planned that when he killed "My First Lion" he should have himself photographed standing boldly with one foot on the lion's neck. He gave his camera to a native, who pressed the button, but when the plate was developed it showed was the corner of McCutcheon's hat and a small part of the lion. There was an excellent picture of a tree, however. McCutcheon's sketches indicate how he expected to appear and what the photograph really showed.

"Lion hunting," says Mr. McCutcheon, "is the best kind of African hunting in one respect. One feels no self-reproach in killing a lion, for there is always the comforting thought that by killing one lion you have saved the lives of 300 other animals. It exacts an animal toll of at least that number of zebras, hartebeest, or other forms of antelopes, all of which are powerless to defend themselves against the great creature that creeps upon them in cover of darkness. So a lion hunter may consider himself something of a benefactor."

The first of this series of remarkable letters and cartoons will appear in The Constitution of Sunday, January 9, 1910, and thereafter for quite a while.

(By Hashimura Togo—Wallace Irwin.)
Berlin, near Germany.
To Editor Constitution, who got a appetite for intelligent food, yet do not realize how nourishing brains can be when they are prepared the German way.

Dear Sir:—
I can write the U. S. Language so fluidly that readers often assimilate all my words. I can also say delicious syllables in Japanese. But I must arrive to Germany, thank you, before I understood how difficult it is to say-so when you can't.

I revere them Hon. Germans because they are remarkable in every direction. They go around living, marrying, marching with militias, operating joke-talking and increasing childhood. And every word of this is done in the German language. Yet they seem to have plenty of leisure for whatever else arrives. Even in their beers they seem to understand each other. In that dear Papaland, when sweethearts persons are walking together by moon-gleam, they make love-conversation by saying "Ich Libbey Ditch." And when next seen they are engaged. This show how Love cannot be smashed by any Dictionary, however thick.

When me and Nogi & O-Fido arrived Berlin we could see how everybody was preparing to go to war with England. Generals, Admirals and other Policemen was setting around Ratskellers telling each other how to do it. Beer enjoyed between all conversations.

"What is more greater than our Navy?" require one Admiral surrounded by his schoons.

"Nothing but our Army," report one General with famous Milwaukee salutes.

"Our navy is twice as great as any."

Do You Suffer from Piles or Hemorrhoids?

Hemorrhoids, commonly called Piles, cause untold agony to the victim. If neglected, the condition always grows worse with every attack, until the sufferer is in an operation. You may think that you are predisposed to piles, and that nothing you can do will prevent them, but this is not true. The one certain cause of Piles is constipation, and if you will keep your bowels open and regular by taking Smith's Pineapple and Butternut Pills you will not only avoid this painful and dangerous disease, but your whole general health will greatly improve.

A torpid, inactive liver goes hand in hand with constipation. Smith's Pineapple and Butternut Pills are composed of the two great vegetable agents, pineapple for the stomach, liver and gastric secretions, and butternut for the mucous membrane, circulation and bowels, and always give best results—they are Nature's own laxative. Physicians use and recommend. They form no habit. You should always keep them on hand. These little Vegetable Pills will ward off any ills.

thing you can imagine," suggested Admiral.
"I cannot follow you," say General. "I am already three drinks behind."
So Hon. Band play some more and everybody order another Hook for himself and one for the Kaiser, who is always willing to shoot when loaded.
When me and Nogi & O-Fido see this warlike preparation, we enjoy Peace Congress feeling like Hon. Carnegie.
"Nogi," I say to my dear Cousin, "Somebody should see Emp Wm and tease him to be gentle with England before it is too late."
"Who would be good persons for this delicacy?" require Nogi with safe expression like a Central Bank.
"If nobody else shall, then you and me & O-Fido must," I pettily nobly, agreeable was-tails from O-Fido.
So we seek forth to search up this Emperor. We elope to Royal Palace, where we was not expected.
"Is Hon. Emperor inside?" we ask out.
He have just stepped out in his ottomobile," say Hon. Haliboy with Frank Hitchcock expression of frozen calm.
"Where to find him, please?" I abduct.
"Wherever there is a Parade he is sure to be hanging around," evaporate this boy giving slam-up to door.
So we accompany our footstep to Templehof Field where military enthusiasm is most often seen marching around. And sure enough! This flat grounds was entirely covered with National Guard Encampments mingled with Scheutenbunds and Artillery. Everywhere the eye could reach was trombone music, uniforms and flags covered with glory. A long tin line of heroes was galloping with angry swords. Such splendid advancing! Such gallant retreating! Backward and forward they eloped with German banzais. When I see so much gunpowder I feel very scared like a Friendly Power.
In the distant way-off me & Nogi could see a Gentleman in a brass helmet clumped between 12 and 1-2 army officers.

"That must be Emp," say Nogi. We gaze reverently in that direction for moments, but just when we was most comfortable the entire German Army come galloping over hill. There was nothing to hide behind but our courage. Yelps from O-Fido. Straight at us stamped them firm horse-riders. When they were 90 feet away, they stopped up and got out their guns. Ready, Ames, Scheuten! holla Hon. Capt. And before we could hear it a volley like Mt Vesuvius mending its steam-pipes burst across our heads. Me and Nogi stand still expecting we would not be seen, but O-Fido become entirely hydropobia by the noise. With yails & squeals like a Suffragette Lecture that doggie mam-

Whisky and Near Whisky

Finer in flavor and in bouquet than the oldest Scotch—rich, ripe, mellow and wholesome—"Rose's Reserve Stock" Corn Whisky, is one of the few real good whiskies now offered to the mail order trade. Of course, it is pure—all of the Rose whiskies are that—all of them made by the old fashioned "primitive" method (boiled and doubled in copper over open wood fires)—the difference in price is simply the difference in age.

Among the ryes, "Rose's Purity Rye" occupies the same high position as "Rose's Reserve Stock" does as a corn whisky. Don't confuse the R. M. Rose Company with the ordinary mail order house. Our methods and our ideals are the same that have won the confidence of the Southern people in our 50 years of experience.

Test Our Quick Delivery System

At the Jacksonville house two shifts of workmen are kept busy, one during the day and one during the night and shipment is guaranteed the day your order is received. We prepay the express to all points reached by the Southern Express lines.

"ASK THE REVENUE OFFICER."

mal start scampering across Templehof Field in the straight direction of Emperor Wm.

In exultant pursuit of O-Fido start me and Nogi hoping to save Hon. Kaiser from death from dog-bites. After us ran the entire German Army with war-cry; but me and Nogi was too Marathon to be caught. Nearer and more closer we come to O-Fido. In another moment we should snatch him. When lo! Somebody grabbed that poor canan with a short kick—and when next we looked we was standing within 3-4 yards of Wm Hohenzollern, the only living Emperor who ever dared imitate Theodore Roosevelt to his face. This great Ruler poked up his moustache and look to me with unwelcome expression.

"Gottedammerung!" report his King. I could distinctly count his Rough Rider teeth while he spoke. "Where in Pilsen did you come from?" "Please, Mr. King, if convenient to reply, we are schoolboys from Japan." We debate our necks together so he could chop up when required.

"From Yappan!" he snigger German locally. "I can see by your complexion that you are Yaps."

We seem very grateful for this kindness.

"We are merely cross-out Japanese," say Nogi like a goat. "We have been living on the Island of America so long that we feel quite inhabited."

"Are your Royal Upness interested in America?" I require soapfully.

"I love all parts of America," say

Wm, "especially Brazil. That splendid little State should be congratulated on its wonderful output of gold, ivory, nuts and ostrich-quills. Its people also should be congratulated on their election of that staid Republican and careful patriot, Senator Hale, to Congress."

"Brazil produces many hard nuts,"

I oblige humbly, "but it never grew Emperor Wm glum peevy at me like he wished to hit me with his mailed fist."

"Where else in America could a great man be born, except in Brazil?" he de-range.

"It is superstitiously supposed that Senator Hale were acquired by Massachusetts for tariff purposes," I manipulate. But if your Royal Majesty wish him to be in South America, it can be easily arranged by many insurgent Republicans, who would be glad to have him as far away as possible.

"Nextly," say Hon. Kaiser taking out a cigar and chopping off the end with his sword, "nextly you will be telling me that Wm H. Taft is not King of the United States."

"We could not report that untruth," I chide. "Hon. Taft is not only our served setting on the throne, but he is officially seen in endorsing Senator Aldrich's policies."

"There is one other Great American that I must admire," rake off Wm forcefully, "but his name skips me at this moment."

"When Hon. Geo Washington or Hon. Thos. Jefferson," suggest Nogi.

"I have heard of them also," report him, "but they are too dead to interest me. I do not care for such patriots. If they are Republicans, then I am something else. But the gentleman I am attempting to remember is so different from Washington or Jefferson that you would recognize him at once."

"Perhaps you mean Hon. John D. Rockefeller?" I depose.

"It is exactly him I mean," holla Wm smilingly. "How is that sweet old man?"

"Still solid, but slightly dissolved," I suggest.

"I hope he lives forever," rattle that Crowned Boss. "He has been more philanthropic to Germany than anything I can mention. He has sold kerosene to the German people several cents cheaper per gal than he would give it to the United States. If he would visit Germany I should make him a Count. He is every inch a Man from the sole of his toes to the crown of his wig."

"He is not only a Man, he is a Scientist," I suppose.

"What great Science has he done?" detest Emperor.

"He has discovered how to strangle hookworms with coal-oil," I suggest.

"What is it a Hookworm?" say Wm with slight German grammar.

"A Hookworm I define, 'is a species of sly snake what reverses itself.'"

"How like the Supreme Court he must look," nag Hon. Kaiser. "No wonder Count Rockefeller wishes to soothe this busy with kerosene."

The Emp of Germany pause and give marcel wave to his moustache. Military parades swish past him. cannone bump salutes and the Royal Carabed Dismounted Irregulars come booming by with guns on edge respectfully. Hon. Kaiser Wm look neglectfully to this.

"Then American millionaires," he say, "are what my cousin Theodore von Roosevelt would call 'a Corker.' They are wonderful vermin."

Carnegie no sooner give $1,000,000 to poison hookworms than Hon. Rockefeller get jealous and give similar amount to poison hookworms."

Me and Nogi see symptoms of a witty thought in these remarks. So we laugh wearily.

"I admire your German wit for its cheapness and lasting qualities," I say with chirality.

"At times I am called the Royal Cat," I commute Wm shyly. "I am not afraid of a cat, but I am afraid of a mouse."

"The difference between me and my Uncle Ed of London, Uncle cannot tell a joke from a farce. I am a humorist. When, in the midst of my schoons, I told him with humorous giggles that I expected to have the greatest Navy in the world, poor old Uncle took me sadly and got scared. As a consequence England have got a Naval Policy of two new battleships a day and a torpedo boat every fifteen minutes. The Admiralty Office have got nervous prostratus and the House of Lords is sick sick with budgets. I am nearly tickled hysterical with innocent amusement to think about all this excitement for nothing. I often wonder where my sense of humor will lead me next."

"Maybe it will lead you to Liverpool with 100,000 German-speaking foreigners," I suggest.

"There are some jokes," say Hon. Kaiser, "that you cannot carry too far to please me. And that would be one of them."

Emp Wm look less conversational. In the distance we could see Hon. Zeppelin's airship approaching for to take His Royal Majesty up for a joyful ride.

"Have you got any slight Presidential Message you would like me to fetch from you to Hon. Taft?" I negotiate.

"Tell Hon. Taft," say Wm with self-appointed manner, "tell him not to blame everything that comes along to the Constitution. Tell him the best way to make Trouble is to seek Peace. Tell him to reverse the Laws but to remember that Truth does not always perch on those who can hire the best lawyers. Tell him the Emperor of Germany gets his advice from God, but that the President of America is usually less fortunate."

Hon. Zeppelin airship now lower down and elevate Emp Wm by step ladder. "The Watch on the Rhine," national air, is played by 72 German bands. Hon. Air-ship sore imperiously away, leaving me and Nogi & O-Fido looking basely upwards like 3 cock-roaches in a earthquake.

Hoping You are the same."

Yours truly HASHIMURA TOGO.

The Southern Prosperity Edition of The Atlanta Constitution, April 1910

UPON THE GIANT SCREEN OF THIS ISSUE THE WORLD WILL GAZE AT AN ACCURATE
IMAGE OF AMERICA'S RICHEST TERRITORY

Dramatic Past; Stupendous Present, Challenging Future---All Will Stride Across the Broad Stage of Its Vivid Pages

With Precision Never Approached, With Completeness Never Approximated in Southern Journalism, The Constitution Will Dramatize the Achievement and the Beckoning Destiny of the Prosperous South

Dipping above the near horizon, appears the good ship, "1910."

Men whose prophecy deals with statistics rather than with emotion, know she bears a cargo of prosperity for the South unparalleled since America dawned upon the council of nations.

The certified pledges of plenty are national. For the south they are intensified; for Georgia, particularized. As goes cotton, so veers the compass of things material in Dixie.

When the "summer snow" of the southland rates high in the world's market, there is the voice of rejoicing in the cabin, the mansion, the counting-house. From the Potomac to the Rio Grande, that song now ascends in volume and unanimity new to the section's story.

One billion dollars is the almost inconceivable sum the barometer-crop of the merging seasons pours into every industrial, commercial and agricultural channel of the Southern States this season. This does not include the multiplied manufactured value of the product.

Neither does the estimate include other myriad sources of the South's income, within themselves vast and expanding. Enough of this near incredible wealth goes to all of the section to give every state an unprecedented impulse toward prosperity; and truly, expectations everywhere are of the most buoyant description. It is Georgia, however, that has been seemingly chosen by Providence over all the south for a peculiar manifestation of its favor. In other Southern States, the cotton crop is unusually short; in Georgia, it is nearly normal. For their short yield, other Southern States receive a high price; Georgia receives the same high price for its almost usual yield. The tremendous advantage, therefore, of this state over its sister states is seen at a glance.

Other infallible portents of sectional and national prosperity are militantly apparent. Already congestion of traffic, final proof of plethora of business, creeps up upon the railroads. Indications thicken, that with the passing of the holiday relaxation, traffic and commerce will begin a climbing tendency sure to swamp the carriers as of old, if they do not in time adopt anticipatory policies.

Upon this titanic background of prosperity and development at which the world will wonder, The Constitution will present in April next a mammoth presentation in type and picture of the South's performance today and tomorrow.

The theme is one of epoch-making possibilities and inspiration. Let us state its terms conservatively:

The flowering of America's western states into maturity, is as yet the most colossal chapter in the history of the world's most colossal nation.

Compared with that, as the sun at noon to the evening star, will be the flowering into maturity of America's Southern States when their speeding destiny shall have been fulfilled.

Volume and variety of resources, a monopoly of civilization's most indispensable product, unrealized assets chartered upon the surface of ice-cold actuality, are pledges to that prophecy.

It is fate ordained by logic, not patriotic fantasies, with which we are dealing.

In an edition, next April, not approached for compactness, completeness, vividness and information in Southern newspaperdom, The Constitution invites the cooperation of the people and commercial organizations, the corporations and the individuals of Georgia; and of the people and the commercial bodies, the corporations and the individuals of the South and the nation.

It is to be an edition reporting to the world the South's conquest of its own almost insuperable obstacles, and a foreshadowing of the South's impending commercial conquest of the nation.
